YOUTH IS HURLED THROUGH WINDOW

Autoist's Head Strikes Wheel of Derailed Streetcar on DeKalb Avenue.

A young mother, her infant son, and a 17-year-old youth were killed and two other persons were injured in accidents in and near Atlanta early last night.

The mother and child were killed in a mysterious accident at the Chattahoochee (Ga.) station of the Southern Railway System.

The youth was killed when the automobile he was driving crashed into the side of a street car at Whiteford avenue and DeKalb avenue, N. E., with such force that the streetcar was knocked from its tracks.

On the side of a streetcar at his death was the fourteenth traffic fatality in the city limits this year and the first this month.

The dead were:
J. R. Fowler, 17, reportedly of 850 DeKalb avenue, N. E.

Mrs. Randolph Childs, 23, of 397
Washington street.

Jerry D. Childs, her 18-month-old son.

Atlanta police revealed the death of the baby and the fatal injury to Mrs. Childs, who died shortly after 1 o'clock this morning in Grady hospital, where previously, both her legs had been amputated.

According to officers here, Mrs.
Childs had been in Chattahoochee visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs.
W. A. Davis, of a Church street address.

Mrs. Childs was an employee of a textile mill and her husband is WPA worker.

At about 7 o'clock last night,
Mrs. Childs left the Davis home to go to a grocery store. About 15 minutes after she had gone, a woman whose name was not learned reported finding the mother and child on the tracks near the station.

The woman said the baby was on the tracks, while the young mother, who was only 23, lay a few feet off the tracks.

The bodies were taken to a Bolton undertaking establishment.

GEORGE F. PEABODY.

GEORGE PEABODY, AGED BANKER, DIES

Philanthropist, Friend of Roosevelt, Succumbs at Warm Springs Home.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., March 4.
(AP)—George Foster Peabody, retired banker who was widely known for his philanthropies, educational and religious work, died of a heart ailment today at his winter home, Pine Glade. He was 85 years old.

He suffered a severe case of influenza in January, 1937.

At his bedside were a daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Peabody Waite; a friend, Miss Allena Pardee, and Mrs. Elizabeth Ames, executive director of Yaddo, the Saratoga Springs retreat for artists and literateurs, of which Peabody was president.

Native Georgian.

Peabody amassed a fortune in the banking business in New York, climbing rapidly to financial prominence after obtaining a connection with Spencer Trask & Company as a youth. He was a native of Columbus, Ga.

He was treasurer of the Democratic national committee in 1904-05; served as a director and vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of New York by appointment of President Wilson.

A member of the board of trustees of the Warm Springs Foundation, he was associated with President Roosevelt in infantile paralysis research work.
He was instrumental in development of the celebrated Mineral Springs at Saratoga, N. Y.

Married in 1921.

In February, 1921, Peabody married Mrs. Katrina Trask, widow of his former business associate. She died within a year.
Yaddo, the Trask estate at Saratoga Springs, was then converted to philanthropic uses.

Mrs. Waite, the daughter, issued a written statement announcing "Simple Episcopal commitment services at the chapel at Jacksonville, Fla., will be held tomorrow or the next day, with memorial services later at Warm Springs, and at Yaddo, Saratoga Springs,
New York."

New York are asked to omit flowers.

Grocer, 78, Shot in Holdup, Dies; Question of Cause of Death Raised

Prospects of an important legal point were seen by police yesterday in the death of William Walter Cape Sr., 78, Austell grocery and filling station operator shot and wounded in a holdup January 7.

Cape died yesterday at the home of a daughter, Mrs. J. W. Grimes, of Smyrna, and police raised the question whether death was caused by a bullet wound in the stomach suffered when he was shot in the holdup, or whether death was due to a head injury suffered when he fell immediatly after he was shot.

It was indicated doctors may be called to testify as to the cause of death, at the trial of S. J.

Wheat Jr., 18, of Lithia Springs, who allegedly confessed to the holdup following his arrest several weeks ago in Camden, N. J.

The holdup loot was $11. Cape attempted to defend himself with a shotgun prior to being wounded.

Final rites will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at Mount Harmony church, with the Revs.
George W. Southern and W. A.
Biers officiating. Burial will be in the churchyard.

Besides his daughter, Cape is survived by his wife; two sons, J. A. and W. A. Cape Jr.; four sisters, Mrs. A. F. Felton, Mrs. J.
D. Armstrong, Mrs. W. E. Dodgson and Mrs. W. J. Lee, and a brother, J. A. Cape.

STREETCAR THUG SLAIN IN BATTLE WITH MOTORMAN

West Hunter Operator, Ordered To Throw Up Hands, Fires Own Pistol at Pair as Answer.

BANDIT, SHOT, DIES EN ROUTE TO GRADY

Accomplice Escapes Amid Hail of Bullets; Employe Was Tipped Off.

A holdup man was shot and killed last night in a gun battle with a veteran streetcar operator at the end of the West Hunter streetcar line. The slain negro was identified as Alfred Barron, address unknown. A companion escaped as the operator emptied his pistol at them.

The operator, L. L. Bobo, told police he had been warned a hold-up would be attempted, and had armed himself. In an affidavit given police after the shooting he asserted the man had fired at him on March 1 in another attempted holdup, which police said had not been reported to them, although Bobo said power company officials had been notified.

Bobo ended his run about 9:30 o'clock, he reported, and got off the car to change the trolley, noting as he did so that two negroes, one of whom he recognized as his asserted previous assailant, were approaching. He drew his gun after changing the trolley and then started to get back on the car.
One of the men came close to the car and ordered him to throw up his hands.

Emptied Gun at Bandit.

"When he ripped out his gun as he started to get on the streetcar I shot. I had my gun ready," He said he emptied his gun at the man, who turned and fled. His companion also disappeared in the excitement.

Bobo then went to Davis street, from where he called police. He said he did not hear any return shots, although the negro's gun later was found to have been fired three times.

Shortly after hearing sounds of firing, the wife of Dr. D. A.
Spence, at 76 Stafford street, near the scene of the shooting, heard groaning in the driveway of their home and, going to the window, saw the negro later identified as Barron and as the holdup man writhing on the ground.

She called an ambulance, and the wounded man, who had been hit three times in the stomach, was taken to Grady hospital. He died en route. A pistol was found in the driveway with three cartridges expended.

Shooting Near End of Line.

The shooting was in an almost vacant field at the end of the car line near an A. B. & C. railroad spur track. Only scattered negro houses are in the district. Police, after talking to the doctor's wife, said that apparently the negro returned Bobo's fire as he fled, since

LOS ANGELES AREA DIGS OUT OF FLOOD AS DEATHS RISE

Toll of 119 Fatalities,
More Than 100 Missing, Reported; Damage Said
To Exceed $50,000,000.

15,000 HOMELESS, LOOTING SPREADS

Police Ordered To Shoot to Kill Vandals; Citrus Cut Off; Water Drops.

LOS ANGELES, March 4.—
(UP)—Receding waters of southern California's worst storm disaster revealed a mounting toll of life tonight as isolated communities were heard from for the first time and were able to give a fuller account of death and devastation over 30,000 square miles of rich and populous territory.

As rescue crews dug in mud and debris for bodies, latest compilations by the United Press showed 119 persons known dead and approximately 100 others missing and feared dead. The toll mounted hourly as additional bodies were dug from demolished homes and debris.

15,000 Homeless.

The Red Cross and other relief agencies set up refuge camps to care for the estimated 15,000 homeless in the area, inhabited by 3,000,000.

Widespread looting was reported. Sheriff Biscailuz ordered deputy sheriffs to patrol all outlying areas to "shoot to kill."

"Bring them in alive if possible—but bring them in," the sheriff's broadcast said.

The count of dead by communities showed San Bernardino perhaps the hardest hit with 30 victims. Casualties from other towns showed:

Los Angeles 11; Riverside 15;
Long Beach 4; North Hollywood-
Van Nuys 9; Ontario 4; Glendale
2; Santa Ana 2; Anaheim-Atwood 14; San Juan Capistrano 2; Fullerton-Placentia 7; Barstow-Victorville 3; Wildwood 6; Ventura 3; Lake Arrowhead 2; Maywood 1;
and Redlands 2.

Dams in Danger Yet.

Although the floods were receding, with millions of tons of yellow water pouring off into the Pacific ocean, there was still serious danger of dams bursting.
Populations of suburban areas above Los Angeles and Pasadena, and of small towns near the lower edge of the Tahachapi range, have been evacuated temporarily.

Los Angeles proper suffered least of the entire area, only eight deaths being reported, with 23 missing. The city was under several inches of water during the height of the flood, and damage to property was enormous.

Engineers set a preliminary estimate of $25,000,000, but it was believed the total damage would be twice that much.

Damage Estimated.

Damage to public property alone in Southern California from the flood will exceed $50,000,000, it was indicated in preliminary estimates by city and county officials tonight, according to the Associated Press.

The President had tea in the green room with the three sisters breathlessly, wearing identical

Tries To Select Campus Queen, Gets Into Trouble

Seven beautiful feminine hecklers, but they're just a headache to Chris Paggo, editor of Oglethorpe University's campus weekly. "You're all beautiful to me, girls," he tells them as he stoically tries to keep his mind on his editorial duties. The girls are getting in a little "back-labbing" for the title of "campus queen" and possibly a Hollywood movie contract. In front, left to right, are Geraldine Wisenbaker, Mary Josey, Medora Fitten and Odette Guthrie. Left to right in the second row are India Upchurch, Lillian Klein and Dolly Phillips. Editor Paggo, the center of attraction, puts on a preoccupied air of defense.

VOTE ON COTTON, FARMERS ADVISED

Owen Urges 200,000 in Georgia To Take Part in Quota Poll March 12.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, March 4.—
Representative Emmett M. Owen, of Griffin, today learned from agricultural administration officials that approximately 200,000 Georgia cotton growers will be entitled to vote in the national cotton referendum to be held in the state March 12.

As a member of the subcommittee of the house committee on agriculture which drafted the new 1938 crop control program, Mr.
Owen has kept in close touch with cotton provisions of the bill since its enactment early this year.

He is advising every farmer in Georgia to go to the polls on March 12 to determine for himself whether the new marketing quotas recently proclaimed by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A.
Wallace shall go into effect.

"Marketing quotas are provided for in the new act in order to give farmers the power in co-operation with the federal government to control the marketing of surplus cotton," Representative Owen said.

"Congress wrote into the act a provision that the production in 1938 should not be less than 11-000,000 bales, nor more than 11-500,000. In accordance with this provision the secretary of agriculture fixed the national cotton acreage allotment for this year at 26,300,000 acres, which, on the basis of a 10-year average yield, would result in a crop of 10,129-000 bales and on a five-year average, 11,250,000 bales.

"The state acreage allotment for Georgia has been set tentativ-ly at 2,037,000 acres. While this is approximately a half million acres less than the acreage planted in 1937, it is about the same as the acreages planted in 1934 and 1935, and conditions under which cotton growers may receive soil conservation payments, cotton price adjustment payments, and borrow money on their crop have been greatly liberalized.

"If a cotton grower declines to

Three Die as Plane Hits Power Line

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, March 4.—(AP)—Three men, including Dudley Golding, prominent Dallas oil man, were killed tonight in the crash of their plane which tripped over an electric power highline in making a forced landing.

Besides Golding, the dead were:
P. F. (Pop) Hotchkiss, of Fort Worth, pilot of the ship.

A. F. (Tex) Bowden, of Dallas.
W. M. Irish 3d, vice president of the Atlantic Crude Oil Purchasing Corporation, was injured seriously but was expected to recover.

Witnesses said it appeared the ship was running out of gasoline, and the pilot was attempting to land in a side-road which runs near an oil field.

Doctor Now Predicts Pershing's Recovery

TUCSON, Ariz., March 4.—(AP)
Dr. Roland Davidson said explicitly tonight for the first time that he was "anticipating the recovery" of General John J. Pershing.

"General Pershing can have a comfortable life during the coming years," Dr. Davidson declared.
"He will have to live a more protected life during the coming years than that to which he has been accustomed. He will be able to do certain things only. He will definitely not be able to meet the great demands that have in the past been placed on his energy and time."

The general ate a hearty breakfast today and had lamb stew for lunch.

100 Reported Killed By Insurgent Planes

MADRID, March 4.—(AP)—A government communique announced tonight that more than 100 persons, mostly civilians, were killed by insurgent bombers at Alcaniz, Teruel province, Wednesday.

Nine bombers and three pursuit planes took part in the attack.
Spanish insurgent leaders today announced a "great increase" in the number of government troops deserting into insurgent lines, it was reported at Hendaye, France.

WETS FIGHT PLEA TO BAR ELECTION

First Resistance Is Made in Dougherty; Rivers
'Hands Off' in Tests.

CAMILLA, March 4.—(AP)—First resistance to the methodical campaign of prohibitionists to prevent local option liquor elections in Georgia was raised here today against dry leaders seeking to enjoin a seventh county referendum.

Six referenda—in Baker, Berrien, Upson, McIntosh, Evans and Quitman counties—were blocked by temporary restraining orders obtained by prohibitionists without opposition as quickly as election times approached, but a similar move against a vote in Dougherty county drew fire today from local optionists.

After day-long argument by counsel over whether a temporary injunction should be granted against a liquor election scheduled for Monday in populous Dougherty county, Judge B. C.
Gardner, of Albany circuit superior court, took the matter under advisement. He said he hoped to be able to announce a decision tomorrow.

Chief counsel for the petitioners was L. A. Whipple, of Cochran.

STILL WANTS LAW FOUGHT BY SOUTH AS INDUSTRIAL BAR

President Voices Belief

Principal Aims, Though

HOLDS FARM PLAN BUYING POWER AID

Starts Day in Church at Service Attended Also by Members of Cabinet.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(AP) President Roosevelt is beginning to entertain doubts that wage-hour legislation—important part of his legislative program—will be passed by congress this year.

At a press conference today he said his objectives are unchanged and that "the old ship of state is still on its same course," but that legislation to put a floor under wages and a ceiling over hours might not go through this session.
He made it plain that he would like to see it get through.

The wage-hour proposal has encountered strong opposition in congress, especially from southerners who helped kill a bill last year, contending it might cripple the growing industries of the south. Recently a house subcommittee decided to "begin all over again" in an effort to draft a bill acceptable to various factions.

Still Adheres to Aims.

Aside from the disclosure about wage-hours, Mr. Roosevelt devoted his press conference today largely to a discussion of policy during the last five years, and in the future. This was the fifth anniversary of his first inauguration.

Methods have changed from time to time, he said, but the five years have seen no swerving from the principal objectives. There have been enormous advances toward these, he said, and some things have failed.

As major objectives he mentioned financial stability, increased purchasing power and an end to special privileges.

The already enacted crop control law he described as a step toward more purchasing power, and he cited the proposed wage-hour legislation as a contribution to the same end.

Begins Day at Church.

Mr. Roosevelt began his anniversary by riding from the White House across LaFayette Square to Little St. John's Episcopal church.
There, at a special service that followed word for word the one he attended before his inauguration March 4, 1933, he joined members of his cabinet for half an hour's devotions.

At his press conference Mr.
Roosevelt said some persons, including most of the reporters present, had from time to time confused methods with objectives.

By way of illustration, he said that when the objective of financial stabilization appeared to be threatened by inflation last April, he adopted the method of putting the helm hard to starboard. He added that when deflation threatened last autumn, the helm was shifted hard a-port in order to hold a constant course toward the objective.

The policy of increasing pur-

CHAIRMAN MORGAN ASKED TO RESIGN BY TVA DIRECTORS

Statement Demanding Congressional Investigation Made Public by F. D. R.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—(P) Members of the Tennessee Valley Authority called for the resignation of Chairman Arthur E. Morgan today in a statement made the more emphatic by the fact that President Roosevelt himself released it to the press.

The statement, signed by Harcourt A. Morgan, vice chairman, and David E. Lilienthal, director, carried the row within the agency—which has been accompanied by charges of obstructive tactics and demands for a congressional investigation—to a new climax.

Chairman Morgan with Vice Chairman Morgan and Director Lilienthal, make up the Authority's entire membership.

Work Accomplished. Their statement said that the work of the Authority had been carried forward from 1932 to 1936 by a board whose every action had the approval of all three members.

Since the spring of 1936, however, it continued, "the Authority's work has been accomplished in spite of the repeated failure of Arthur E. Morgan (the chairman) to accept and co-operate in carrying out provisions of law and board decisions. Much that has been accomplished since the spring of 1936 has been in spite of Mr. Morgan's continued efforts to obstruct board decisions with which he has disagreed. For more than a year, as a consequence, the undersigned majority of the board of directors have been compelled to assume responsibility for the project.

"There have been many instances in American public life in which a public officer, having been unable to persuade his colleagues or his superiors to his own views, has retired to private life and, standing up as a private citizen, has continued to contest and seek to upset a policy with which he disagreed as a public officer. To this there can be no possible objection. If, however, he remains as an executive officer of an agency with the decision of which he is out of sympathy, an obligation rests upon him not to use his vantage point as an executive to obstruct the carrying out of determined policies."

Religious Census To Be Conducted By 3 Churches

Volunteer workers will canvass the Adair Park and Capitol View sections tomorrow afternoon to take a religious "census," it was announced yesterday by the Rev. A. Julian Warner, pastor of Capitol View Presbyterian church.

More than 100 members of Stewart Avenue Methodist, Capitol View Methodist and Capitol View Presbyterian churches will make the canvass, going from house to house, to learn church affiliations or preferences of individuals in every home.

Tragedy Strikes Twice in Week At Mother of Twin Boys and Girls

Mrs. Roberson's Mother Dies, She Is Hurt in Crash Killing Brother, Sister.

Tragedy struck twice within a week yesterday at Mrs. J. L. Roberson, of 522 Grant street, S. E., mother of identical twin sons and daughters, whose photographs appeared in The Constitution last week.

Mrs. Roberson's mother, Mrs. J. C. Ireland, 83, died Monday at her home on Chattahoochee avenue, Bolton, and was buried Tuesday. Yesterday, Mrs. Roberson was injured in an automobile crash in which her brother and her sister were killed and three other relatives were injured.

Victims of the accident, which occurred when a passenger car sideswiped a truck 11 miles south of Jasper, Fla., were Eugene E. Ireland, Jacksonville insurance man, and Mrs. Clara Brown, of Bolton, with whom the recently-deceased mother lived.

Besides Mrs. Roberson, who suffered a broken arm, the injured were Mrs. Eugene E. Ireland, wife of the dead man, who suffered a broken shoulder and possible fractured ribs; Mrs. W. C. Ireland, also of Jacksonville, Ireland's daughter-in-law, who was cut and bruised, and Eugene Wooten, 4, Ireland's grandson, who suffered minor cuts of the face and body.

According to Mrs. Roberson's twin daughters, Beatrice and Bernice, 19, the party left Atlanta at noon Thursday. Ireland and the others had attended the funeral of the elderly mother, and were on their way to Jacksonville. Mrs. Roberson decided to make the trip in an effort to allay grief at her mother's passing.

Two Killed Outright. Ireland was driving his sedan when it struck the truck, driven by B. L. Brown, of Macon, shortly after midnight Thursday. Ireland and Mrs. Brown, who was a life-long resident of Bolton, were reportedly killed outright. The injured were taken in ambulances to a hospital in Lake City.

Relations here said Mrs. Brown's body would be brought to Atlanta for funeral services, and that Ireland's rites would be held in Jacksonville.

Mrs. Roberson, who was the former Miss Bessie Ireland, has a sister here, Mrs. J. E. Corsey, of 44 South Evelyn place, N. W., and a brother, Willie Ireland, of Birmingham. Her husband is employed by a chain food store.

Return in Doubt. It was not known when she would return to Atlanta. Mrs. Roberson's twin daughters and twin sons, Marshall and Merlin, 10, look exactly alike. The boys resemble each other so closely that Mrs. Roberson cannot tell them apart. She simply addresses either one or both boys.

H. M. Patterson & Son will announce funeral plans for Mrs. Brown, who was a prominent member of the Collins Memorial Methodist church.

Police who investigated the accident exonerated the driver, according to Associated Press reports. The dead man leaves a wife and four children.

CALDWELL PAYS TRIBUTE TO GEORGE PEABODY

George Foster Peabody was one of the best friends and greatest benefactors of the University of Georgia ever had. Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the university, said last night in paying tribute to the widely-known philanthropist.

"I think the university has never had a man who has done so much for it, both from a physical and an intellectual standpoint, than George Foster Peabody," Dr. Caldwell said. "Through his contribution in money he has aided the physical development of the institution, while at the same time he has exerted a tremendous influence on the intellectual progress and development."

School of Forestry. Dr. Caldwell referred to the establishment of the school of forestry at the university, which is named for the benefactor, and recalled that only about two months ago he made a contribution for the geology laboratory.

"Mr. Peabody had many friends at the university who mourn his death and his presence and influence will be greatly missed," Dr. Caldwell said.

In addition to his contribution to the forestry school, Mr. Peabody gave $50,000 for the construction of a library, aided in the development and expansion of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, and contributed funds for the erection of Memorial Hall and a swimming pool.

Benefactor Paid Tribute. He also made benefactions for the establishment of a religious welfare secretaryship, as well as contributions for railway tickets and hotel accommodations to its representatives on important trips of investigation and study.

Collins Pays Tribute. From M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools, came the following telegram:

"I have just returned from Atlantic City where I have been attending national meeting of the American Association of School Administrators and I am met with the news of the home going of Doctor George Foster Peabody. The last conference I had with Doctor Peabody was on March 18, 1937, in connection with representatives of the Roosevelt Foundation when President Roosevelt dedicated the Warm Springs school.

"Doctor Peabody has meant much to the educational opportunity of the people of Georgia, the nation, and the world. May the multiplied graces of the Almighty God be with him and his abundantly, now and always."

PLANT-TO-PROSPER MADE RALLY PLEA

Dean Chapman Talks to 300 Boys and Fathers at Brooks Cattle Show.

QUITMAN, Ga., March 4.—(P) Success of The Atlanta Constitution's Plant-to-Prosper campaign means the writing of a "new declaration of independence" for Georgia's 273,000 farm families, Dean Paul W. Chapman of the Georgia State College of Agriculture told a Brooks county rally of farm boys and their fathers here tonight.

Stressing the importance of livestock and dairying activities, Dean Chapman urged the boys and their fathers to join The Constitution's program and "plant and farm your way to additional economic independence."

The address was the major one at a banquet which was a feature of the Brooks County Future Farmers of America cattle show here today. About 300 students of vocational agriculture and their fathers attended the meeting.

"Real Winner" Defined. Professor W. J. Cooley, Brooks county school superintendent, issued the invitation to Dr. Chapman to speak on the program.

"The winner of livestock shows or any other farming activity is not the person who takes the prize, but the one who produces most at the lowest cost," he said. "This is something to be kept in mind at all times. The real winner of a livestock show is the person who puts on the largest number of pounds at the smallest cost. Our one great problem is how to reduce the cost of production."

"In this connection, I should like to call your attention to the record of the men who have been selected as the master farmers of the south."

"Recently, I had occasion to write to practically all the master farmers in the south. I asked specifically about their ideas concerning farming and their management. I found they all think alike."

Living Home First Aim.

"Without exception, every single one of them stated that living at home was the first objective of any successful farming program."

"The second question I asked them was whether or not they followed a systematic policy of enriching and improving their soil. There was not a single man in this entire list from Virginia to Texas who did not take the specific plan of conserving and improving his soil."

Dr. Chapman then told of the diversity of activities the master farmers were practicing and how these enabled the farmers to provide their families with better housing facilities and more comforts.

In Constitution Program. "All these things that I have suggested as a part of the farming program, you young men should study in preparation for this occupation, are included in the program of the Plant-to-Prosper contest being sponsored this year by The Atlanta Constitution."

"I sincerely hope and trust that all of you young men will make a careful study of the aims and objectives of the Plant-to-Prosper contest. I hope that all

Youth Killed as Auto Knocks Street Car From Rails

An Atlanta youth was instantly killed when this car crashed into a streetcar last night at Whiteford avenue and DeKalb avenue. The youth, J. R. Fowler, went through the windshield and his head struck a wheel of the streetcar. The windshield and safety glass, was shattered. Radiator of automobile was smashed in and tire was ripped loose from a front wheel. Impact threw the streetcar off the tracks. The driver's companion and the streetcar motorman were slightly injured.

of you will interest your fathers in entering this program.

"State-wide success for The Constitution's program will mean the writing of a new declaration of economic independence for the 273,000 farm families of Georgia."

It will be reflected in every line of activity, and the state as a whole will benefit immeasurably.

"As you perhaps know, the Plant-to-Prosper contest sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution provides for generous cash awards to those farmers in the state who make outstanding records on the basis of a score card upon which farming achievements under the Plant-to-Prosper contest will be evaluated."

"There are four major divisions in the score card of the Plant-to-Prosper contest. These are: (1) Live at home; (2) conservation of the soil; (3) diversification of farm income and (4) home improvement."

A booklet outlining all of the farming activities which may be carried on under these four headings will be sent to every person who enters this contest. This booklet in itself is a valuable piece of literature which will be helpful to any person who is willing to take the time and trouble to study it.

"It embodies almost identically the same features of farming which have made the master farmers of the south so successful. It embodies all of those things which have added to the prosperity of the most successful farmers of south Georgia."

"It has been said repeatedly in the newspapers of Georgia this year that our farm income is very low. It has been stated in many public addresses delivered throughout Georgia this year that the average farm income in our state is less than $200 a year."

"In this connection, one year

18-Foot Boat Starts Voyage Over Sea

TAMPA, Fla., March 4.—(P) Al Lastinger, seafaring adventurer from inland Lakeland, Fla., set his sails today for a solo crossing of the Atlantic from Tampa to Genoa, Italy, in an 18-foot ketch, the Miss Tampa, in which he hopes to make the 5,000-mile trip in 120 days.

Behind him he left not the gray Azores as Columbus did but the good wishes of hundreds who gathered at the municipal yacht basin for a ceremony that included a champagne christening for the tiny craft and a priest's blessing.

This is his second venture in a trans-Atlantic solo voyage. Three years ago he embarked from Daytona Beach in a 10-foot boat, got 75 miles out and was picked up by a United States coast guard vessel when the tiny cockleshell leaked so badly he had to abandon it.

ago, I made something of an analysis of the farm incomes of Georgia and I discovered among other things that there were 18 counties in south Georgia, in each of which more than 500 farmers lived whose incomes were in excess of $1,500. When we stop to realize that there are so many relatively high income farmers in Georgia we shudder to think how little thousands of our farm people must make if our average income is so low.

"A further analysis of the high farm incomes of Georgia revealed that every one of these high income counties that had more than 500 farmers with an income in excess of $1,500 a year represented not only one of the livestock counties of Georgia but a county that had a great variety of sources of farm income. This is merely one more evidence of the soundness of the Plant-to-Prosper program which is being sponsored by The Constitution."

"I am very greatly interested in this contest because I believe that it embodies the most important things that will make it possible for us to increase the farm income of Georgia. I commend this contest to your study and consideration."

11 PLANES SEARCH FOR LOST AIRLINER

Little Hope Held That Passengers Escaped Death.

FRESNO, Cal., March 4.—(P) Eleven planes scanned hundreds of miles of jagged, snow-blanketed terrain today in the disheartening search for the skyliner lost in last Tuesday night's terrific storm.

Search leaders would not be quoted but privately they admitted there was only "one chance in ten thousand" that the Transcontinental and Western Airliner escaped from the treacherous, storm-ridden area without killing all nine persons aboard.

Ground searchers deployed over the Castle Peak region, 80 miles north of here, but worked for hours without finding any trace of the plane. That area had been mapped out as possibly the most likely place to hunt.

DIVORCEE GIVEN $10,000 VERDICT

Jury Rules Rector Trifled With Her Love.

STUEBENVILLE, Ohio, March 4.—(P) A federal court jury of 12 men late today returned a verdict awarding Cora Lillian Burnham $10,000 and costs in her $100,000 breach of promise suit against the Rev. Harold C. Zeis, Episcopal rector.

Neither the New York city divorce nor the defendant was in court when the jurors returned their decision after deliberating three hours and 40 minutes.

cials here said they had not heard of an accident, but that the crack "Ponce de Leon," Atlanta to Cincinnati Flyer, passed the point where the mother and baby were found at about 7:15 o'clock.

According to police reports and officials of the Georgia Power Company, Fowler, driving the car of Walter Holtzclaw, 17, of 309 Georgia avenue, S. W., who was in the front seat of the sedan with him, was proceeding north on Whiteford avenue at about 8 o'clock last night.

At Underpass. The car had just passed under the railroad underpass near the car line on DeKalb avenue as the street car, operated by M. D. Smith, of Route 2, Austell, moved eastbound, going to Decatur.

Holtzclaw was quoted by police as saying Fowler apparently did not see the street car.

The automobile crashed full-force into the street car, near the front. Impact threw the conductor, H. A. Jones, of Decatur, to his feet, and shook several of many passengers as the street car swerved and swung to a cross-wise position across the tracks.

The sedan was virtually demolished. The radiator was smashed in, windshield and window glass were shattered and a tire was ripped loose from a front wheel.

Fowler was hurled through the windshield and his head struck a wheel of the street car.

The body was then taken to the establishment of Harry G. Poole, who will announce funeral arrangements.

Loses Five Teeth.

Smith and Holtzclaw were taken to Grady hospital. Smith was treated for cuts and bruises of the face, and Holtzclaw was treated for a deep laceration of the forehead, cuts of the chest and right hand. Five of his upper teeth were knocked out by the impact.

Holtzclaw said he was on his way to work at a restaurant at 2288 Peachtree road, where Fowler worked until recently, at the time of the accident.

The collision attracted scores of spectators, and automobile traffic became snarled in a knot that took police half an hour to untie. Streetcar traffic on the Decatur line was delayed about a half hour until an emergency crew set the car back on the tracks.

Although the conductor was thrown to the floor, he was unharmed. No passengers were injured, according to reports of police and power company officials.

ATLANTA, GA., MARCH 5, 1938.

WHAT OF CZECHOSLOVAKIA?

When, in 1918, the Hapsburg monarchy collapsed, it left in the Danubian basin of Central Europe a maze of ruins. The true succession states to the empire were Austria, Hungary and Czechoslovakia. The fate of Austria hangs now in the balance. Should the Nazi element emerge into power it will throw into sharp focus the fate of the republic of the Czechs and the Slovaks, created under the aegis of an American president.

This republic, with its 15,000,000 people, was formed out of the provinces of the Austro-Hungarian empire which were the most advanced economically and culturally. Peoples of these provinces, Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia, Slovakia and sub-Carpathian Ruthenia, had, with extraordinary tenacity, preserved their own character in the face of the policy of suppression pursued by the dual monarchy in political, economic and cultural affairs.

It comprises the most valuable centers of economic activity of the old empire. About half the grain production, 70 per cent of the coal production and by far the most valuable and up-to-date industrial equipment was situated in this area. In its early years, agricultural production did not suffice to feed the population but, under the pressure for self-sufficiency which has marked the central European states since the World War, now meets the need, with a surplus for export. On the other hand, industries designed to supply fifty million people had now only a market of 15,000,000, resulting in a contraction as neighboring states became more highly industrialized.

Czechoslovakia did not become infected, however, with the collapse of financial morality in Europe, and through currency devaluation forced by world conditions and by intelligent planning, its economy has been greatly bolstered through the last four years.

This is the nation most observers feel is the next objective of the Nazi march. An ally of France, but pinched in between Germany and Austria in such a manner that help from that source would be extremely difficult, the republic has a well-equipped army, ample armament and munitions manufacturing facilities with which to wage for a short time a defensive war in the face of odds.

Yet, this young country in which has been instilled much of the American ideal of democracy, prepares for what her people consider inevitable, and her statesmen warn Hitler her people are ready to battle to defend an independence hard won.

TIME TO PLAN

The Fulton county commission, recently empowered by the legislature to zone areas in Fulton county for residential, business and industrial purposes, wisely voted Thursday, on motion of Commissioner Ed L. Almand, to establish a method of handling zoning matters and asked the county attorney, Walter C. Hendrix, to draw resolutions setting up a county zoning and planning commission to handle future applications.

This step, if followed through to its only logical conclusion, will be far-reaching in its effect. It will permit intelligent planning for county growth that will enable the county to avoid the pitfalls which have beset other less fortunate metropolitan areas. It will protect homeowners from encroaching business and industry, allotting to each its proper sphere.

Rigid planning and zoning will prevent the disfigurement of beautiful residence sections by unregulated building of roadside stands, filling stations, possibly odorous industries and other businesses which make the section less desirable to homeowners and homebuyers and tear down property values, resulting in losses both to the citizens and to the county tax rolls. For each time this is permitted and values drop, the county income also drops.

Now is the time for intelligent, rigid planning to make the metropolitan areas of the county attractive to homeowners, to business and to industry, and to insure that each will be given its proper protection.

GEORGE FOSTER PEABODY

George Foster Peabody died yesterday at his winter home at Warm Springs, Ga. His death brought to a close a career which contributed as much to the cause of higher education in Georgia and the south as any of the past century.

He was a native of Columbus, Ga., but moved when a boy of 14, with his widowed mother and two younger brothers, to Brooklyn, N. Y. His first business experience was in a drygoods store and he won his education by attending the night school of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. while working in the daytime.

As a banker he achieved great success and became known as one of the greatest contributors to the cause of education of his generation.

He was a trustee of the University of Georgia for life, made so by special act of the Georgia legislature, a distinction never accorded any other citizen of the state. He was a member of the General Education Board and a trustee of the American Christian Institute for Negroes, Hampton Normal and Industrial Institute, Penn Normal and Industrial School, Skidmore College, Warm Springs Health Foundation, as well as the University of Georgia.

In 1902, realizing the need for a fireproof building to house the library of the university, Dr. Peabody gave the entire sum needed, $50,000, out of his own pocket. He contributed a total of $60,000 to the war memorial fund of the university and paid the entire cost of the building and equipment of the Muscogee Practice School, one of the university's most useful buildings, used in connection with normal school courses as a laboratory for actual teaching experience.

Dr. Peabody founded the School of Forestry at the university, which bears his name, the George Foster Peabody School of Forestry. In 1905, desiring to see something done for the conservation of the forests of Georgia, he offered the trustees $2,500 a year for three years to apply on the salary of the first professor of forestry. This was the first forestry school ever established in a southern university.

He was a close friend and warm admirer of President Roosevelt and was the first to interest the President in the curative properties of Warm Springs for infantile paralysis. He was known as the father of the Warm Springs Foundation.

He never attended a university or college, but on the rare occasions when he spoke in public, he was noted for his choice diction. He held the honorary degrees of master of arts from Harvard University, of doctor of laws from the University of Georgia. He was always interested in the Democratic party and was treasurer of the Democratic national committee in 1904-5. He was deputy chairman, government director, of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in 1914-21.

In his death the state loses a native Georgian who, without ostentation, had given beyond computation of his enthusiasm, his wealth and his advice to education and to all causes which he believed contributed to the improvement of living conditions and of mankind.

His name will be perpetuated as long as modern education lasts, not only in the schools which bear his name, but in the hearts of all who came, directly or indirectly, within the wide scope of his influence.

IN PARLIAMENTARY MANNER

Dickens' timeless influence has been hovering over the British parliament once more. Critics who claim his "Circumlocution Office" was a gross exaggeration have been confounded once again. Puzzle addicts and those who have torn their hair and burned midnight oil over income tax returns will find an order recently issued by the party "whips" of parliament worthy of their mettle.

Here it is: "Government business shall have precedence on as many Wednesdays immediately before Good Friday as the number of Wednesdays before Christmas on which it has not had precedence, and on as many Fridays immediately before Good Friday as the number of Fridays, reduced by three, on which it had not had precedence before Christmas."

In true British manner, though, we must presume parliament was able to "blunder through."

Oddest phenomenon of the time is the enthusiasm of the masses for the purely imaginary—Snow White, Charlie McCarthy and world peace.

(From the Christian Science Monitor.)
Apparently America hasn't gone to war after all. Sometimes lately belligerent and bitter words no less than a rush to arm have made it appear that the "world struggle" between Fascism and Communism was about to be settled somewhere between the Alleghenies and Rockies. "War Is in the Air," a magazine headline declares. It has seemed that about all that was needed for open hostilities was a first-class spy story. And right on schedule the headlines, but only to fall flat! It makes a few headlines, but for the most part is very coolly received. Why? Is it because some people are suspicious enough to think that exposure at this time fits very well with a new arms program? Is it because a flood of spy stories, fictional and historical, have made this exploit appear rather tame? Is it that millions of Americans know that espionage is a regular part of friendly international relations and are confident that the efficient work of American spies in other countries balances anything foreign agents may do?

Probably a better explanation is that Americans are not really as alarmed or as belligerent as their newspapers. There is still a basic sense of security in the United States. Even talk of a "two-ocean navy" has not anticipated immediate invasion from Europe. And many Americans are actively combating the belief that they must choose between two evils, Fascism or Communism. They are attempting to maintain an island of good will in a world which is still much less insane than the "news" would appear to make it. They are endeavoring to keep their thinking positively peaceful.

It takes more than spy stories to upset America today.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

BUDGET BALANCING WASHINGTON, March 4.—In the last weeks, a policy decision of immense importance has been inconspicuously made at the White House. After considering the depression problem from every angle, the President has refused to desert Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., and the budget-balancers. He has chosen to wait the spring out before resorting to large-scale spending or other drastic remedies.

Pressure for an opposite course was not lacking. Indeed, it was so strong that, for several days, the outcome trembled in the balance. A large group of the President's most influential advisers, led by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, were and are still convinced that immediate heavy spending is a vitally needful stimulant to business. Their advice has been temporarily but rather completely ignored.

No indication of the intensity and violence of the policy crisis has yet appeared on the surface. Some hint of it can be gathered, however, from the private talk of the participants. For example, Chairman Eccles is reported to have told the powerful banker members of the Federal Reserve Advisory Council that, without the prompt expenditure of at least $1,000,000,000, the country would find itself next fall in a depression as dark and cruel as any it had ever experienced.

On the other side, Secretary Morgenthau and his followers hang on for dear life, encouraging the President to optimism, and reminding him that a new resort to spending simply meant beginning the work of the New Deal all over again.

CRISIS OF LOQUACITY The inception of the crisis, which is precisely what it was, occurred about the beginning of February. Then the President faced the fact that he had a depression on his hands, and began to cast about for effective remedies.

The actual crisis took place in the week between February 10, when the President requested congress to supply $250,000,000 of relief money, and February 17, when he made his statement on prices. During those seven days, the White House and at a long series of meetings of New Deal fiscal experts and economists, the arguments raged higher and higher between the budget-balancers and the spenders.

The spenders were confident that, with the President finally convinced of the depression's depth, triumph would be theirs. Chairman Eccles hammered eternally for the $1,000,000,000 sweetening of the economic pot which he advocates. Others pleaded for still more extreme steps. There was even serious talk, by responsible members of the administration, of such wild schemes as that of Senator Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio, for an $8,000,000,000 "self-liquidating" system of transcontinental highways.

The most discussed expedient was the $1,000,000,000 WPA housing program, already reported here as the favorite of the spenders. But there was actually a moment when the budget-balancers thought themselves lucky that the transcontinental highway plan had been studied and found impractical three years ago by Secretary Morgenthau and a parkway expert borrowed from New York City's Robert Moses. The study was undertaken at the President's request, and the flaws found in the idea were easily recalled.

CRISIS ENDS In the end, the budget-balancers found their best ally, as men selling policies to the White House usually do, in the President's own inclinations. It is not generally understood how completely the President's mind was made up last fall to balance the budget, however unpleasant budget-balancing might prove. The firmly conservative speech of Secretary Morgenthau in New York really presented a faithful picture of the President's own thinking.

The ground, of course, was cut from under the President by the collapse of the business of the country. But he remained and still remains, unwilling to revert to a spending policy. As one close adviser described his feelings, such a reversion reminds him too much of a man who has got his car almost to the brow of a steep hill, and then, just because the engine stalls for a moment, lets go the brakes, slips back to the bottom, and starts all the way up again.

Because of the presidential distaste for spending, the budget-balancers won. And all the meetings, all the talk and advice of the time of crisis produced only four minor steps—the supplementary relief appropriation, the abandonment of gold sterilization, the final signature of the farm bill, and the White House lecture on prices.

THE FUTURE For the present, such budget-balancers as Secretary Morgenthau must, one suspects, have their fingers crossed. The minor steps are expected to provide the stimulus to business which the spenders would have offered in a more lavish fashion. They may do so.

If they fail, however, another policy crisis is sure to come. At present, the President is determined to wait and see until the spring is over. He has been promised that there will be a spring upturn. He has been convinced that, with the extra stimuli already mentioned, the spring upturn will become a healthy recovery. But, if a spring upturn should fail to materialize, the whole problem will have to be reconsidered. And then the betting will be 100 to 1 on the spenders.

Lula's Way of Feathering Her Nest.

I am indebted for the character study which follows to Lorine T. Smith, secretary to the school superintendent of Troup county. The story of Lula, who was determined to teach school, fascinated me and perhaps it will work a similar spell over you.

Lula, writes Mrs. Smith, came into the superintendent's office one day in August, last. She wished to know if there was a chance for her to secure a job teaching in one of the county's schools for negroes.

Lula explained she had no teacher's certificate, because it had been destroyed when her house had burned, recently. Told she must have one, to teach, she asked how to go about getting one and was told to apply to the State Department of Education. Her application blank was filled in, signed and mailed.

"Can't Get No Hearing."

But let Mrs. Smith tell the rest of the story:

"Two or three weeks passed before I saw Lula again. One morning, I looked up as I heard someone in the door talking in rather a grumbling tone. 'I can't get no hearing from them folks,' she said. 'I guess I'll just have to stand a 'xamination and get me a county license.' She asked when the examination would be held and I told her if she would give me her address I would notify her when we expected to hold the examination."

"My address is gonna be changed after Sunday, cause I'm gittin' married," she said. 'But I'll let you know what it will be. You see, one of the folks in the school where Ise gonna teach is a widower, and he's got several chillun and I thought I'd jest marry him and help him take care of them. I been married twice before, and when my first husband died and left me with a bunch of little chillun, a man married me and helped raise 'em, and now I think, since all my chillun is grown, that I oughta help somebody else raise his.'"

"It seemed that Lula was intent on telling me her whole story. 'You know,' she said, 'Ise had a hard time in my life with husbands. My first husband didn't have no education and you know how hard it is to keep a man without no education out of trouble. And then when he died, all the young men said I looked all right to them, but they wa'n't hankering after marrying a woman with so many chillun, so I had to marry an old man, and you know how hard it is to be married to an old man.'"

Children's Care

A Simple Problem.

"I asked Lula what she meant to do with the children while she went to school, and she let me know at once that that was an easy thing to figure out, because they were all old enough to go to school, and she would just take them to school with her every morning. She let me know, too, that the man she was to marry owned his home and farm, and she figured that maybe he could give her a good living."

"I have thought of Lula often. I don't know exactly what her motive was—whether she was really sincere about her duty to help the man with his 'chillun,' whether his being a trustee would guarantee her a job, or whether she was just looking out for number one by getting herself a home. Anyway, she was very conscientious, or she had a very good eye for business."

Goering Threatens.

NEW YORK—Adolf Hitler has just taken pains to explain to the world that his intentions are peaceful, that the hatchet, in go far as France, the old, hereditary foe is concerned, has been buried for good. Privately, he seems to have assured the Austrian chancellor, Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg, that he will respect the independence of Austria, to the immense satisfaction of Mussolini, no doubt—and now comes General Goering and rudely upsets the whole thing again.

Goering said frankly that the German air service is itching to go into action and quite ready to show its invincibility. "Our air force is just a peaceful flock of doves at the present time," he said, "but if we should come over one of those cities in the borderlands, the world will see that we are schrecklich-terrible." There is no doubt of that. In Spain, especially in the conquest of the Basque-land for General Franco, the German airforce has given some startling demonstrations of its schrecklichkeit.

By the very use of that word schrecklich—it was a favorite expression of the German high command, the imperial propaganda bureaus and the German newspapers at the time of the last war when it meant utter and pitiless ruthlessness—the world is reminded that in a pinch with their back to the wall, when it is either world power or crushing defeat again for the Reich, the new high command headed by Goering will not hesitate one single moment to use all the means of destruction at its disposal to gain the upper hand.

In other words, all those pious attempts to humanize war by agreements between the various states not to use poison gas, not to bomb civilian centers, not to set peaceful villages on fire—all that is wish-dreaming. In Germany Gen. Ludendorff's theories contained in his book, "The Total War," have been accepted as official doctrine.

The total war, that is what the chiefs of staff envisage—if they must take the plunge. One of the commanders of the Red army wrote the other day in the official military gazette of his country that the Soviet Union had vast stocks of disease germs on hand "just like the Fascist bandits" and would have no compunction in scattering over the length and breadth of the territory of the state which would dare to invade Russia.

The masters of human destiny are well agreed on one point: whatever terror is available that they will use.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON

"SUCH AS I HAVE."

Sunday's lesson, Mark 6:1-13, presents the pathetic picture of the people of Nazareth again rejecting Him, and His commission to the 12 to go forth preaching and healing. It will be recalled that Jesus went from Gadara, the scene of last Sunday's lesson, to Capernaum, where He healed a sick woman on His way to the home of Jairus, the ruler of the synagogue, where he raised his daughter to life.

"And He cometh to His own country," Jesus walked this distance of approximately 25 miles from Capernaum to Nazareth in a day, no doubt ministering to many along the way. He had not been invited back home, but evidently He wanted to do something for the people of that little city where He had spent His first 30 years. He wanted to see His family—perhaps they would now believe in Him! But a second time Nazareth rejected Him, not as rudely as the first time, but as definitely. Alas for Nazareth! "He came unto His own, and His own received Him not." One is tempted to stay the whole time with this solemn truth in the lesson. Individuals reject Jesus. Families reject Jesus. Cities reject Jesus. Nations reject Jesus.

He had brought the 12 with Him, and after the sad experience in Nazareth, Jesus sends them out to minister to a dying world. It was a discouraging moment for them to go out when they had just witnessed the sad spectacle of His own people rejecting Him, but He sent them, and they went.

Jesus calls us today to particular service in particular fields. We need not worry about the results. Our concern is to go in His name and in His strength, proclaiming His message to those whom He designates. The Holy Spirit will guide us to the right place and we will be "guided into all truth." The Holy Spirit will empower us if we are willing to be imbued. The Holy Spirit will not only prepare us, but will prepare those to whom we are sent.

And we need not worry about our equipment. We are to use what we have—what Jesus has given us. We are to use all of it—of our strength, all of our love, doing His will. If those we seek to help reject our ministry, it is not our responsibility. They are not rejecting us. They are rejecting Jesus.

Picturesque City.

With a population of 76,000, Lausanne has the air of a metropolitan up-and-coming city. Its ancient streets are lined with modern buildings. Smartly dressed people crowd the shops. White helmeted policemen keep the heavy traffic moving. Iron railings along the curb at busy corners are a discouragement to jaywalkers. Little blue street cars, which look as though they had tried to squeeze through too narrow alleys and never had sprung back to their normal width, clang for right of way.

Another Letter From a Bald Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My Dear Louise:

That slattern we saw begging on the street yesterday was a half-wit, and the unwashed brood that followed her will grow up to be like her.

You were disgusted and horrified—not by her mental deficiency, but by her dreadful appearance. Her shapeless body was covered by a dirty cotton dress. Her hair hung in strings from a careless knot. She wore no stockings and her shoes were unlaced. In fact she fully justified your look of disgust.

I am not presenting her as a horrible example of what happen to careless little girls. You couldn't be like her if you tried, for the first requirements would be a feeble mind. But please remember how her appearance affected you, and reflect that similar sight affect other people in much the same way.

As most girls do, you have dreamed of romance since you go out of troupe. You expect to be married. And though the knight on a white charger will doubtless turn out to be a freckle-faced boy in a striped-down flannel, he will come a-courting and in due time you will begin the great adventure together. Then your chief concern will be to keep his love and admiration, and whether it proves to be easy or difficult will depend largely on the habits you are forming now.

I know an elderly gentleman who removes his shoes every night after supper and sits in his sock-feet till bedtime. He has done it for over 50 years. Two old-maid aunts who "raised" him had the same habit, and he learned it from them. In later years he felt choked if he tried to keep his shoes on.

You think your early-morning appearance doesn't matter, since only the family see you; but the habit of looking sloppy matters a great deal, for you will almost certainly continue it after the honeymoon is over—and your man will be affected somewhat as you were affected yesterday.

Many a man leaves for work in the morning depressed and hopeless because his wife doesn't care how she looks at home. He's caring, too, after a while, and then another marriage is on the rocks.

Being lazy is rather pleasant, at times, but it never is pleasant to realize you are disgusting somebody.

Love, DAD.

TROTSKY ANSWERS

Charges made in the current Moscow treason trial that the defendant plotted with Germany to foster the conspiracy with the aim of overthrowing the Bolshevik government. The writer, a co-leader with Lenin in the Russian revolution, was exiled by Stalin after a struggle for supremacy that followed Lenin's death.

By LEON TROTSKY.

The feature which distinguishes the present Moscow trial is the exaggeration of the old accusations to the point where they re-lapse into a complete and definitive absurdity.

In 1921 we had just finished the civil war triumphantly, the international position of the Soviet Union had become stabilized, the introduction of the new economic policy (NEP) gave life to frozen economic forces. We had the right to contemplate the future with real optimism. An expression of this optimism in particular was my report to the third congress of the Comintern (June, 1921).

GERMANS OFFER SERVICES

AS FREE LANCERS

On the other hand, Germany at that time was groping in the Versailles blind alley. Its economic strength had been sapped; its military power was practically nonexistent. Thousands of German officers became free lancers, offering their services to many far-flung countries.

Moscow dispatches link my name, in some sort of tie-up, with that of General Hans Von Seeckt, at that time head of the Reichswehr. This gives an inkling of justification for the hypothesis which I presume, will be indirectly affirmed later on in the trial.

From the moment of the overthrow of the Hohenzollerns, the Soviet government aimed for a defensive alliance with Germany against the entente and the peace of Versailles. But, at that time, social-democracy, playing first fiddle in Germany, feared Moscow and placed all its hopes on London and especially on Washington. From its side, the officer caste of the Reichswehr, despite its political enmity against Communism, considered a diplomatic and military collaboration with the Soviet republic necessary.

RAPALLO AGREEMENT

"On the other hand, countries were in no hurry to put themselves out to satisfy the social-democrats' hopes, the 'Moscow' orientation of the Reichswehr proved to have an influence upon government circles as well. The highlights of this period was the conclusion of the Rapallo agreement, establishing friendly relations between Soviet Russia and Germany (April 17, 1922).

The military commissariat, which I headed, was planning in 1921 the reorganization and rearmament of the Red army in line with its passing from the state of war to one of peace. Vitally concerned to improve the military technique, we could expect then co-operation only from Germany. At the same time, the Reichswehr, deprived by the Versailles treaty of opportunities for development, especially in the fields of heavy artillery, aviation and chemical warfare, naturally aimed to make use of the Soviet military industry as a test field.

The beginnings of German concessions in Soviet Russia took place at a time when I was still immersed in the civil war. The most important of these in its potentialities, or more accurately its expectations, was the concession granted to the Junkers aircraft concern.

This concession involved a certain number of German officers coming to Soviet Russia. In turn several representatives of the Red

AIR AND ONEST
Editor Constitution: I am a nurse and a Republican, but your paper has always seemed to be fair and honest in its treatment of general affairs and in its editorials.

Your editorial, "And the Greatest of These," is outstanding in its clarity of purpose, its vision and its strength. You have struck the right note. I have sent my copy to a friend in California. I hope that this editorial will be widely printed in the United States.

EDITORIAL REVIVES OPTIMISM

Editor Constitution: The daily newspapers of today, of a necessity, are so filled with war, crime and other news of a sordid nature that it is a real challenge to the average man to maintain a spirit of optimism. For the first time in my life I am having difficulty fighting off pessimism.

Your editorial "And the Greatest of These," which appeared in the Constitution this week revives my, almost dormant, optimism.

More of the great daily newspapers of our land would follow your lead with similar editorials, there is no estimating the effect it could have upon American life. Allow me to express my personal appreciation of a policy that permits such a great editorial. I am proud to be a citizen of a city which can boast of having such a great newspaper.

COMMENDS EDITORIAL

Editor Constitution: Please permit me to commend the splendid editorial of March 1 on "And the Greatest of These." This article was timely and is what the nations of the world need at this critical moment. Would to God that every diplomat, yes, every dictator, could read this article, and be governed by it. Its contents should be shouted from the housetops to our own citizens.

WANTS CITY MADE NEATER

Editor Constitution: It is gratifying to see that the city council of our lovely city is taking an active interest in having all vacant lots within the incorporated limits kept in decent condition—but why stop at vacant lots?

Property owners should be required on all homes, either occupied by owner or by tenant, to keep premises in clean condition. I don't hesitate to say that from West Peachtree to Juniper, between Eighth and Eleventh streets, is more filth and waste paper (usually dirty), especially in alleys and in rear of stores, than one would encounter in a 2,000-mile drive through the state of Florida; if tenants will not keep their premises clean and attractive, then the owner of the property should be required by law to do this.

TOWARD A FULLER LIFE

Editor Constitution: Thank you for the editorial which appeared in The Constitution on March 1. I sincerely hope that it does express a definite trend on the part of men and women. We get no where through hatreds.

NIMMOELLER SENT TO DETENTION CAMP

Pastor Set Free by Court 'Custodied' by Nazi Secret Police.

BERLIN, March 4.—(P)—Pastor Martin Niemöller, rallying point of Protestant opposition to Nazi efforts to dominate the church, has been sent to a concentration camp by the German secret police, despite his being set free by a court.

His wife collapsed when she was told today her husband had been sent to the Sachsenhausen, Saxony, camp. His six children and friends despaired of ever seeing him free again when the full significance of his detention at Sachsenhausen dawned on them.

In that camp of about 3,400 "custodied" men are said to be nearly 1,000 members of the International Bible Students' Association and others who have run foul of the Nazi regime for reasons of conscience.

The Gestapo, the secret police, is reported on good authority to be determined none of the "offenders against the state" would ever be released again unless they retract and promise to change their attitude of opposition.

Niemöller's past gives little hope that he is likely to come around to the point of view of the Gestapo, which has sole discretion as to how long he is to be held in "protective custody."

Even the minister of justice, Franz Gürtner, who reported reliably to have been unable to save Niemöller from the Gestapo. He was said to have fought against handing the pastor over to the secret police.

Farm Program Questions

The Constitution, in co-operation with the Georgia Agricultural Extension Service, presents here another set in a series of questions and answers designed to clarify for Georgia farmers the recently enacted cotton and tobacco farm program.

Q. How large a cotton crop may be expected in 1938 if farmers plant only the 26,300,000-acre quota announced by the secretary of agriculture?

A. With average yields, 26,300,000 acres would produce approximately 10,750,000 bales of cotton.

Q. How many acres of cotton were planted in 1937 when the government farm program did not call for quotas?

A. In 1937, approximately 34,000,000 acres were planted to cotton. This acreage produced a crop of 18,746,000 bales, the largest cotton crop in the history of the United States.

Q. If marketing quotas are approved March 12 what will happen to a cotton farmer who overplants his allotted acreage?

A. If quotas are approved, the farmer who overplants his allotted acreage will be required to pay a penalty of two cents a pound on all cotton he sells in excess of his quota. In addition, the farmer who overplants will lose his conservation payment and cotton price adjustment payment. Furthermore, while the co-operator will be entitled to a government loan on his cotton, the non-co-operator will not be able to get a loan on any part of his crop except that produced in excess of his quota, and the loan rate on that will be 40 percent less than the loan rate on the cotton of co-operators.

Q. Will cotton farmers receive any additional payments for operating in the new farm program?

A. The new act does not provide for additional payments on cotton in 1938, but the conservation program will still be in operation and cotton farmers who plant within their acreage allotments will continue to receive payments for soil-building.

Q. How does the new farm act fit the Triple-A conservation program that was in effect last year?

A. The soil conservation act, under which the Agricultural Adjustment Administration was operated last year, provided for payments to farmers for conservation practices. Adjustment of production was merely a by-product obtained by farmers taking land out of soil-depleting crops, such as cotton and tobacco, and planting it to soil-conserving and soil-building crops. The new act does two things: First, it continues, amends and strengthens the soil conservation act under which the conservation program will continue to operate; and second, it provides for more effective control of burdensome surpluses of cotton and other major crops through marketing quotas.

Q. Will the conservation program under which farmers receive payments for soil-building continue, regardless of whether marketing quotas are voted on favorably in the March 12 referendum?

A. Yes, the conservation program will continue and acreage allotments will be the same, regardless of whether marketing quotas are approved. If quotas are approved, there will be a penalty on non-co-operators which otherwise would not be in effect.

Q. Where can detailed, printed informational material on the new farm program be secured?

A. All county agents in Georgia have for distribution copies of printed leaflets explaining the general provisions of the act and separate leaflets explaining how the act applies specifically to cotton and tobacco.

REUNION PLANNED BY OLD BATTERY B

Members of Old Battery B, National Guard, will hold a reunion Sunday at the home of R. M. Stewart at Cravenwood station on the Marietta car line, it was announced yesterday.

Only 75 members of the unit of 150 men who saw service on the Mexican border and overseas during the World War are still alive, Stewart said. The unit was composed of Atlanta men.

STANLEY IS NAMED PAROLE BOARD HEAD

Succeeds Former Chairman Johns of the Old Prison Commission.

Plans for operation under the new prison and parole law will be drawn immediately by the state prison and parole board, the new chairman, Judge Vivian L. Stanley, announced last night.

Stanley was named yesterday to succeed former Chairman G. A. Johns, of Winder, Johns, chairman of the former prison commission, was appointed with Stanley and Clem E. Rainey by Governor E. D. Rivers to serve on the new parole board.

Johns said he introduced the resolution designating Stanley as chairman of the board, and added the chairmanship would be rotated so each member of the commission serves two years during his six-year term.

Stanley, who became a member of the former prison commission October 9, 1928, served four years as secretary and three years as vice chairman.

Johns became chairman of the old prison commission June 23, 1936, succeeding the late E. L. Rainey, father of Clem E. Rainey, third member of the board.

Stanley, who was born in Dublin, was editor and publisher of the Dublin Post for several years and later was editor and publisher of the Dublin Courier-Herald for 16 years. He served as commissioner of Dublin one year, city clerk three years, commissioner of Dublin two years, postmaster of Dublin under President Cleveland for four years and under President Wilson eight years.

A former operator of stores and hotels in Maysville and Commerce, Ga., Mr. Stephens had lived in Atlanta for the last 15 years. He was a member of the Baptist church, and was a Mason.

SHAKEN BOY STABS MOTHER TO DEATH

Truant Sticks Her in Neck, Washes Knife.

CHICAGO, March 4.—(P)—Theodore Daniels Jr., 16-year-old high school student, confessed today, Police Captain Collins said, that he slew his partly crippled mother because she punished him for truancy.

The boy told police he stabbed his mother with a kitchen knife during a violent quarrel yesterday afternoon in which, he said, "she shook me and slapped my face."

Authorities said the youth confessed a few hours after he was seized in a hotel where he had registered as "E. Wilson." As told by police, his story was:

"I came home yesterday afternoon and told my mother I'd been truant from school for weeks. She was mad. She grabbed me by both cheeks and shook me up. We were in the kitchen."

"I reached back, grabbed the bread knife and stuck it into her neck. I took towels and washed the fingerprints off the knife."

LONE BANDIT HOLDS UP DOERUN BANK CASHIER

DOERUN, March 4.—(P)—A daring daylight robbery of the Citizens Service Bank was committed here today when a lone bandit walked into the bank, forced the cashier into the vault, locked him in, and proceeded to take an undetermined amount of money.

J. F. Watkins, cashier, was preparing to close the bank and go to dinner when the robber entered. Locked in the vault, he managed to make himself heard shortly after the bandit left.

According to Watkins' description, the bandit was a "tall guy dressed in overalls."

The Doerun police spread the alarm to authorities of surrounding counties. State troopers were also notified.

Japanese Imperialism Blamed On Occidentals by Club Speaker

Dr. Heyward J. Pearce Jr., of Emory, Tells Masonic Group That Nipponese Are Following in Footsteps of America and Other Western Countries.

Japan has learned imperialism from the western nations, in the opinion of Dr. Heyward J. Pearce Jr., of Emory University, who addressed members of the Atlanta Masonic Club yesterday.

Tracing the history of Japan and China from 1840 down to the present, Dr. Pearce explained that Japan is only following in the footsteps of America and other western countries in carrying on her aggressive warfare in China.

"Contrary to the popular belief, the Japanese are not inherently militaristic people," he declared. "They have had the longest peaceful history of any people on earth with the possible exception of the Chinese."

Aggressive Warfare.
He added that "we Americans had more aggressive warfare prior to 1890 than did the Japanese."

Dr. Pearce explained that his sympathies in the present conflict are with the Chinese, but "viewing the situation from an historical standpoint we must look at the subject objectively and let the chips fall where they may," he said.

He voiced the opinion that Japan will not attempt to annex any new areas she is successful in conquering, but will set up puppet governments "to avoid the risk of being absorbed."

Misconceptions Cited.
Americans must get rid of certain misconceptions they have about the Japanese, Dr. Pearce asserted. Japan's history, he said, does not begin with the invasion of General Perry in the 1800's but dates back 2,500 years before that time—600 years before the Christian era.

Another misconception, he declared, is that the Japanese have only recently come out of barbarism. "Japan has had an ancient, long and glorious culture," he said.

Dr. Pearce believes that a thorough knowledge of the history of the two countries is necessary in order to understand the present situation.

During a span of 30 years the Japanese have been described in four different ways, he pointed out. First, they were a "quaint" people, then they became an "amazing" race, during the World War they were termed "presumptuous," and today they have become an "atrocious" people, the speaker said.

HIGH COURT REFUSES 'BANK NIGHT' REVIEW
The supreme court yesterday refused to review a decision of the court of appeals in the case of Frank Barber, of Albany, accused of operating a lottery in connection with a theater "bank night."

Barber appealed from a ruling of Judge Clayton Jones, of Albany city court, overruling demurrers filed by Barber on the lottery charges. The court of appeals upheld Judge Jones and Barber sought a writ of certiorari to take the case to the supreme court.

The case will now go back to Albany city court to be tried on its merits.

JAPAN PROPOSES POWERS ABOLISH CAPITAL WARSHIPS

Hirota Urges Conference in New Bid for Friendship With U. S.

TOKYO, March 4.—(P)—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota urged world naval reduction by abolition of all capital warships today in a renewed bid for friendship with the United States.

"As long as we fully understand each other," Hirota told a parliamentary budget committee, "I am confident there will be no trouble between Japan and the United States."

The foreign minister, who long had sought a friendship accord with the United States, told the committee "we are doing our best to promote friendship through an exchange of messages with Secretary Hull."

Answering a question about American fortification of the Pacific coast against Japan, Hirota said he was sorry any misunderstanding of Japan's motives had caused such a step to be taken.

His actual expression was a Japanese idiom which translated literally as "I am sorry for America." A better expression of the meaning, however, the foreign office spokesman said later, would be:

"I am sorry America feels the necessity of taking such a step, which is an unnecessary expenditure, because Japan has no intention of attacking." Hirota said that Japan "would welcome the opportunity to discuss the question of naval reduction with the powers."

If such opportunity appears, the Japanese government will propose the total abolition of capital ships.

(Such ships were defined by the 1921-22 naval treaties as those, other than aircraft carriers, of more than 10,000 tons with guns larger than 8-inch.)

(Japan refused to sign the latest naval treaty—the London 1936 pact between Britain, France and the United States—which limited capital ships to 35,000 tons and 16-inch guns.)

BRITISH NAVY ASKS $618,535,000 MINIMUM

LONDON, March 4.—(P)—The British navy asked today for a minimum of $618,535,000, swelling Britain's share of the world naval armament race for 1938 to more than $1,800,000,000.

The officially-estimated grand total for navy, air force, army and miscellaneous services was set at $1,750,000,000 ($1,758,750,000) but when the final request went to parliament today the year's price for defending the empire's globe-girdling shores added up to $61,985,000 pounds ($1,809,925,000).

Even using the official figure the British taxpayer discovered that the defense cost to every one of Britain's 46,000,000 people will be more than $35.

Today's huge naval estimates, announced to commons by Alfred Duff Cooper, first lord of the admiralty, did not give the bill for the building of two battleships, seven cruisers, one aircraft carrier and other ships to be started this year.

The size, and consequently the cost, of these depend on what Britain, the United States and France decide to do about building up to an unknown quantity—Japan.

Experts of the three powers even now are considering what action to take in view of Japan's refusal to say whether she was building monster battleships of more than 35,000 tons.

But Duff Cooper disclosed that the year's bill for work on naval armament already under way would be $123,707,000 pounds ($618,535,000). The cost of the new building program roughly was placed at $50,000,000 pounds ($250,000,000), only a fraction of which will be charged to this year's budget in supplemental estimates to be made later.

The previously announced estimates were $557,510,000 for the air service, $532,500,000 for the army and $101,380,000 for ordnance factories.

JUSTICE HUTCHESON WILL LEAVE BENCH

Jurist Shuns Strain of Campaign; Dave Parker Offers for Seat.

Shunning the strain of a campaign, 76-year-old Justice John B. Hutcheson, of the Georgia supreme court, said yesterday he would leave the bench at the end of his term, December 31. Assistant Attorney General Dave Parker, of Waycross, announced for the post.

Erect and vigorous, Justice Hutcheson said his health was "good" but added, "I do not wish at my time of life to undergo the additional strain of a possible campaign for re-election."

Parker's announcement for the seat is the second within recent weeks. W. H. Duckworth, a leader in Governor E. D. Rivers' campaign, and also an assistant attorney general, said some time ago he would be a candidate for Justice Hutcheson's place in the fall primary.

Began Service in 1919. Justice Hutcheson began his judicial service in 1919 as an appointee to the Stone Mountain circuit superior court by Governor Hugh M. Dorsey. He was elevated to the supreme court in 1934 on appointment by Governor Eugene Talmadge and was re-elected for a four-year term that year.

He will be the second member of the supreme court to leave the bench in recent months. The first was Justice Marcus Beck, who retired last fall under provisions of the judicial retirement act passed by the legislature in 1937.

This act provides that justices who have reached the age of 70 and completed 20 years continuous service on the supreme and superior court benches are eligible for retirement at two-thirds supreme court justices' pay—$4,666 a year.

Justice Hutcheson declined to say whether he planned to ask retirement under the legislative act before his term automatically ends.

Thanks, Many Friends. "In making this announcement I wish to thank my many friends over the state who have voluntarily given me their assurances of support and who have further assured me that I would be re-elected," he stated. "In my last race the people were good enough to give me their votes in 158 counties out of 159, and I only lost that one county by nine votes."

"My health is good and while I could perform the duties of another term on this important tribunal, I do not wish, at my time of life, to undergo the additional strain of a possible campaign for re-election."

Director of Penal Administration To Begin Duties at Prison Tuesday

Phil Anderson, Now Only 29, Elected Mayor of Perry at 25, and Has Practiced Law Since 1931; Mills To Be in Charge of State Farm.

REIDSVILLE, March 4.—(P)—A. M. (Phil) Anderson, 29-year-old lawyer, is slated to establish his headquarters as executive secretary of the newly created state board of penal administration at the new $1,760,000 Tattall prison near here Tuesday.

As executive member of the board, he will have charge of all Georgia penal units with the title of director of penal administration.

Born 29 years ago in what is now Peach county, Anderson was educated in Houston county's schools, later attended Emory University, subsequently studied law at Mercer, and was admitted to the bar in 1931. He began practice in Perry, where he has since made his home.

In 1934, he was elected mayor of Perry, and was still in office when appointed by Governor Rivers to a one-year term on the five-man board of penal administration.

He is chairman of the Houston county Democratic committee, and a member of the board of directors of the Georgia Municipal Association.

Surgery Relieves Water on Brain in Child Cases

BOSTON, March 4.—(P)—Recent advances in brain surgery indicate that water on the brain in children, long regarded as a fatal disease, can be relieved under certain conditions, opening the way for normal growth to maturity.

This was reported at the annual combined meeting of the Boston Surgical Society and the Philadelphia Academy of Surgery held in Boston this week.

The results from a series of these delicate operations were presented to back the opinion that the operation itself could now be employed with some degree of assurance to save life.

Its employment was advocated, however, only in "selected cases," and in an early stage of the disease.

A recently-devised instrument is used in the operation, permitting the surgeon to peer into the recesses of the brain and, with precision, electrically shrivel up the cells holding back from circulation the fluid which, when dammed up, causes the head to swell.

MAGGREGOR FAILS TO REACH CANADA

Commander Suffers Severe Frost Bites.

By CLIFFORD MAGGREGOR, Commander, Macgregor Arctic Expedition. (Copyright, 1938, by The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

REINDER POINT, Greenland, March 4.—(By Wireless)—John Johnson and I have just returned to camp after spending eight days on the ice in Kane basin and Smith sound in an attempt to reach Ellesmere Land, Canada, to lay out an airplane landing field.

We traveled due north to a point about 20 miles from Ellesmere Land. We camped there for three nights, hoping we would get a shift in the ice and the lead would close. However, the open water continued and no change appeared in the ice. On the morning of February 28, conditions were still unimproved so it was decided to return to camp as our food supply was getting low. It had been expected that we could reach Ellesmere Land in about two days' travel.

The entire trip was made with temperatures around 25 to 30 below zero. Both of us suffered from severe frost bites on the face and ears. Another attempt will be made next week by proceeding further north.

SOCIAL CREDIT PLAN DOOMED IN CANADA

Supreme Court Rules Alberta Legislation Is Unconstitutional.

OTTAWA, March 4.—(Canadian Press)—Canada's supreme court today blasted the foundation stone from under the social credit plan of Premier Aberhart, of Alberta.

The court not only ruled unconstitutional three Alberta bills that were the framework of the program but Chief Justice Lyman Duff also ruled against the Alberta social credit act, cornerstone of the structure.

Aberhart said he understood Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King intended to take the rulings to the privy council in London for final decision. He said this was his understanding regardless of what decision was handed down in Ottawa today.

The three adverse rulings were on legislation to create credit control, increase the taxes of Alberta banks and censor newspapers "to insure the publication of accurate news and information."

Social credit, on which the Aberhart government was elected in 1935, envisioned "credit dividends" of $25 a month for all adult citizens of Alberta, increased consumers' purchasing power, elimination of profiteering, control on price spreads of goods dealt in within the province, increased internal credit, lower individual indebtedness and no hasty foreclosures.

STATE MAY INSTALL PENAL ROCK QUARRY

Plan To Use Incurable Convicts To Supply Road Material.

Georgia's incurable convicts may be worked in the state-owned rock quarries near Elberton. A. O. Blalock, chairman of the state board of penal administration, said yesterday, while A. M. (Phil) Anderson, the board's executive secretary, announced appointment of Fay Smyly, of Rome, as his secretary.

Blalock said the board will go to Elberton next week to inspect the quarry and the grounds with the view of establishing a public works camp there if such proves feasible. Incurable prisoners would quarry the rock for Georgia road materials. The state bought the quarry some time ago but it has never been operated.

Smyly will begin his new duties immediately at Tattall prison, where Anderson will set up his offices.

He became the second candidate against Senator George L. Berry, who has announced for renomination to the post to which Governor Gordon Browning named him after the death of Senator Nathan Bachman.

POOR RELATION

By MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Katha Lodge leaves her New Hampshire hamlet for a New York visit at the invitation of her wealthy uncle, Richard Carruth, and his foster-daughter Lois. Lois meets her train and on the way to the Carruths' Park avenue penthouse warns Katha to call her aunt Evelyn, not Aunt Evelyn. Kemp Loring and Bill Millicent are among those there for the cocktail hour, but Lois has warned her not to look at Kemp twice or her sister Millicent's claws will come out. She likes Bill but wonders whether this wealthy boy isn't merely planning to amuse himself with her. Her Uncle Richard, a last arrival, greets her warmly. Evelyn pleads an engagement after dinner and evidently considers her niece's visit a trial. Millicent goes out with Kemp. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT V.

And today and tonight and tomorrow she would see Bill, she was thinking. This enchantment must not last, must not grow! Lois brought her horse along-side. "Did you and Bill have fun last night?" Then she laughed. "Why, you're blushing!"

Katha's eyes were dark and bright. The small-town girl falls in love with a rich playboy the first date she has with him. She sees quite a lot of him after that because she's quite a novelty to him. Then she goes home, hurt, and lives in yesterday's for the rest of her life. He forgets. He has so much to make him forget. If he thinks of her at all, he thinks of her as that nice, wholesome kid he took out a couple of times. But back home she remembers everywhere they went and everything he said and did. "She glanced at Lois who was regarding her soberly. "That isn't going to happen to me—not if I can help it!" But you're lost already, she thought weakly. Lost . . .

"Bill is one of the nicest people I know," Lois said. "I've never heard any scandal about him. Of course he's gone with a lot of girls . . .

"Yes, I'm sure he likes variety." They rode on without speaking for quite some time. Then Katha saw Lois stiffen. Following her eyes, she saw them riveted on an approaching rider. He came closer, a lean, brown-clad, hatless young man . . . It must be Terry Reese! And she saw that he, too, was straining his eyes through the mist . . .

Lois tightened the reins and sat, slim and boyish-looking, awaiting his approach. Katha thought, "I like her humility. Love does that to you. She could ride by him proudly, being Richard Carruth's daughter."

Lois said, "Hello, Terry." And when he stopped and smiled, she introduced him to Katha, who liked him at once. Then Lois said, "I haven't seen you for a long time, Terry."

His brown eyes looked into hers. "I haven't been riding much lately. Studying, you know. How've you been?"

Words. Empty words, Katha thought.

thought. She knew that Lois wanted to cry. "Why won't you see me? I've been out almost every morning, looking for you. Don't be stubbornly proud. Why do you let it matter that I am Louis Carruth?"

Terry said after a moment of awkward silence. "My hour is almost up. So long, Lois. Very glad to know you, Miss Lodge."

Lois turned in the saddle and looked after him for as far as she could see him. Then she said miserably, "You see?"

"I see."

"I can't run after him. But if I would, I'd do anything. He's lonely. Katha, and I'm lonely and I love him. Dad would do anything for him if he knew I loved him. Of course, mother might be difficult . . ."

"She sighed. "Well, at least I saw him again. I know he's still here. I've been praying just to see him again. Her smile was wistful. "Isn't he splendid? So big and strong and fine looking. He's—he's everything I want. Katha, let's ride fast."

Richard was having breakfast when the two girls came in. Lois put her arms around him and kissed him.

"We're going to eat with you, Dad. We're starved."

Richard smiled at Katha's glowing face. "Having a good time? I suppose you think this is a crazy household, that it's odd Evelyn goes out in the evening without me. Grace wouldn't approve, would she? But Evelyn is young and she likes parties. You mustn't come to any wrong conclusions about your Aunt Evelyn, Katha."

Lois lashed swept downward. Katha said, "She's been charming to me and I'm having a lovely time."

"And Millicent," Richard said, making excuses. "I've seen very little of her since Kemp's been in town. That's pretty serious, I'm afraid."

His innocence, his faith touched her. But if he knew that Millicent and Kemp quarreled constantly, and that last night Evelyn had lifted her face for Eric's good-night kiss . . .

When they went as far as the elevator with him, he said: "Lois, tell your mother there's a possibility I'll go to Chicago today. I'll call her, of course, but she may be out."

Katha went to her room. This wasn't a home. Would being married to Bill be like this? Why did wealth separate man and wife and set them on different tracks? She could not endure a marriage like Richard's and Evelyn's. She wanted her parents' kind of marriage where two people lived intimately and closely and shared equally. And Bill . . . Oh, keep him away from her heart! Laugh with him and dance with him but don't let him near her heart!

She wrote to her mother, slept a little, and awoke with a start, realizing that it was only half an hour before Bill would call for her.

An hour later, wearing a wine-colored dress and a small dark hat, she sat opposite him in a popular eating place. And now she knew that it had not been the glamour of last night, the music, the wine, the series of places he had taken her which had stirred her so. Looking at Bill's gray tweed shoulders and at his face, she knew that it was Bill, the man himself. At home she had liked to dance with Larry, she had admired Tom's big shoulders, she had liked to hear Hugh laugh, and she had liked to talk books with Paul. Now she thought, "Last night dancing with Bill was like dancing on top of the world, away from everything and everybody. He has splendid shoulders and I love his deep, sudden laugh and we've just been talking about books."

Bill said, "I like you in that color. What do you call it?" "Wine," Katha smiled. "I like gray tweed, too, Bill."

He smiled. "You know, I believe we like—us. In fact, I think we're a pretty fine team. Know why? Because we can do the giddy things we did last night and have fun and laugh, and because we can sit here now in a dignified manner and talk about good books and good food and world problems. That's good teamwork." He couldn't find the right words for her. And even if he could, he was afraid she'd look at him very calmly, not believing a word.

What do you say to a girl you're mad about, a girl you're certain you can't live without, the one girl out of all the girls in the world for you?

He looked at his watch. "Hey, your education is being neglected. Didn't I promise to show you the town?"

As they went out, they passed Millicent and Kemp.

Millicent said to Kemp, "Well, it looks as if their first date went off successfully."

Kemp said, "When those keen eyes of Bill's miss you, it must be love." He looked across the table at her pale hair—a frame around her lovely face. "We're doing better ourselves today, darling. We haven't quarreled. Probably because I haven't proposed to you today."

"Oh, Kemp, don't! We always quarrel. I don't know. . . It means. . . It means giving up a few of the things you've been accustomed to—for me. Think about it."

Katha was "shown the town." When she reached the penthouse, Evelyn was out and Lois said that Richard had phoned that he was flying to Chicago. She said, "The weather is terribly unsettled and I'll worry about him. But I'm the only one who will. They don't care what happens to him. They don't even know he's gone!"

Katha dressed, her hands unsteady. Bill came again, a black and white and bronzed Bill in evening clothes. They had dinner, went to the theater, and stopped afterward at a place for food. It was another unforgettable evening, she thought, sitting beside him in the car as the snow obscured the view of Park avenue after midnight. Another unforgettable evening which would be by tomorrow another yesterday to remember, to cherish always. . . .

Again, as he had last night, he stepped into the drawing-room briefly. But when she looked up, about to smile, about to say something casual, his arms went around her and enclosed her in them. She did not know that she was lifting her mouth to meet his. . . .

No use to fight any more, Katha thought. I love him. I'm in love with Bill. . . .

He said, "Tomorrow night? The party at the Henshaws . . ."

She nodded, her throat full, her eyes glistening. . . .

And Bill went out too shaken, too stirred to whistle even off key tonight. And Katha went to her room and cried. . . .

Wearing brown breeches, a brown coat, and a brown felt hat with an upturned brim, Lois came to Katha's room when the latter was having breakfast the following morning. . . .

"I didn't call you to go riding with me," she said. "I thought you would be too tired."

Uncle Ray's

A LITTLE SATURDAY TALK.

Now I want to tell a little adventure which befell me as I was about to sail from Singapore.

All my baggage was on board the steamer when I left it to go to a store and to post some air mail letters. The center of Singapore is about two miles from the docks, but it seemed I had plenty of time to get back before 12 o'clock noon, the time for sailing.

I really did have enough time, but there were two or three delays along the way. The driver of my taxicab could understand only a few English words, but he could misunderstand many of them!

Turning back, at last, toward the dock, it seemed I had just enough minutes left to get there before the big "stairway gangplank" was lifted. As it turned out, however, I was two minutes late. The gangplank had gone up on the stroke of 12. The ship officers did not know a passenger was missing, or else they would have waited a few minutes for my return.

The steamer had not started to move away, but its side was about four feet from the edge of the dock. I shouted, "Wait a minute!" and in a few seconds a ship officer called down to me:

"Can you climb a rope ladder?"

"I think so," I replied, and waited until it was lowered.

I looked at the rope ladder with some care, for I did not want to risk my life to catch the boat. The ladder, however, had wooden rungs between the side-ropes, and seemed safe enough.

The lower end was swung over, and I asked two men on the dock to hold it tightly while I climbed. Then I took firm hold, and began to make the upward journey of 20 or 25 feet.

I did not know it then, but several years ago, in Singapore, a young man had tried to climb aboard a vessel with the help of a knotted rope. He had slipped and fallen. It is believed he struck his head on the edge of the concrete pier. At any rate he went down into the water, and was not seen again. Hungry sharks may have dragged him down—there are many of these ugly fish in Singapore harbor.

My rope ladder was a better one. As I climbed each rung, I took a new firm grip on the side-ropes. In a few minutes I was up on the dock. Hundreds of people on the boat had watched the event, and a crowd had gathered on the dock. A cheer went up when I got safely aboard, but I am sure that next time I shall not be late for the boat!

JACKETS DEFEAT TULANE, 44 TO 29; JOHNSTON STARS

O'HARA LOSES.
EAST GREENWICH, R. I., March 4.—(AP)—Walter E. O'Hara, former president of Narragansett Racing Association, Inc., today lost his fight to have quashed an indictment charging him with criminally libelling Governor Robert E. Quinn when Judge Mortimer A. Sullivan overruled various demurrers and pleas in abatement and motions to quash.

Fast Track in $100,000 Santa Anita

$50,000 HIALEAH LISTS 'ADMIRAL' AS BIG FAVORITE

$50,000 Expected To See
$100,000 California Classic Today.

By ROBERT MYERS.
LOS ANGELES, March 4.—(AP)—Santa Anita's fabulous $100,000 handicap captured the fancy of the nation's top following today and a record-breaking crowd of more than 60,000 was expected to watch the fourth running of the classic tomorrow.

Nineteen thoroughbreds, headed by the mighty Seabiscuit and Pompon, top favorites in the race, were named to go into the mile and one-quarter battle for the richest purse in the world.

Seabiscuit, Pompon, Seashifter, Stagehand, Aneroide, Amor Brujo, Top Row, Indian Broom, Whicchee, Time Supply, Star Shadow, Primulus, Cont Atlas, Zigzag, Townsman, Frexo, Warlow, Gosum and Woodberry.

It was an east vs. west issue between Pompon, owned by Jerome H. Louchheim, Philadelphia, and Seabiscuit, the 1937 handicapper, owned by Charles S. Howard, San Francisco.

Other threats.
But this duel may be for the boards and some other entry may come in to win, leaving the favorites to the fate that fell to favorites of previous years—like Discovery in 1936 or Equipoise the year before.

J. A. Manfuso's Aneroide, conqueror of the Biscuit last Saturday, and Maxwell Howard's double-barreled threat, Seashifter and Stagehand, were rated the best chance of causing an upset—An upstart as far as the Seabiscuit-Pompon factions were concerned.

Seabiscuit goes in at top weight of 130 pounds and ridden, for the second consecutive year, by an unfamiliar jockey, George Woolf, who rode Aztec to victory in the 1935 Santa Anita handicap.

Charley Rosenberger, the lad who booted Aneroide in over Seabiscuit, will be aboard that steed again, Johnny Gilbert pilot's Pompon.

Wall on Stagehand.
Trainer Earl Sande imported little Nick Wall from Florida to handle Stagehand, winner of the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby, and signed heavier Jack Westrop, his contract rider, for Seashifter.

Weight assignments among this group gave the Sande entries a big edge. There was Seabiscuit at 130, Pompon and Aneroide at 122, Seashifter at 112, and Stagehand, a colt, at 110.

A. A. Baroni's Top Row, which won the 1936 famed "wild west" handicap, was back for another crack, but he won't have Wayne Wright in the saddle. Danny Brammer will do the riding.

Track officials announced late today that post time for the big race had been set for 4:25 p. m. (6:25 p. m., Atlanta time).

War Admiral Heavy Favorite.
By PAUL MICKELSON.
MIAMI, Fla., March 4.—(AP)—War Admiral, the great chip off the old block, goes after the Widener challenge cup at Hialeah Park tomorrow and he looks like a certified check to the weary and badly dented horse players who are one short cut away from the post house.

The small but mighty son of Man O' War, unbeaten in his nine starts since 1936, must carry his heaviest weight of 130 pounds and face a probable field of 12 or 13 in the mile and a quarter test but hardly one expert can figure out a serious contender. In fact, the Admiral figures to go postward at 1 to 2, shortest priced favorite of the Florida racing season. By the time the expected crowd of 23,000 plunges at the mutuels windows, his price may be lower than the record of 1 to 3 put on Brevity two years ago in the Florida derby.

On the basis of final workouts, Thomas J. Healey's Tatterdemalion shaped up as the Admiral's foremost rival. He worked five furlongs in his final tuneup yesterday in :58. With only 107 pounds and the third post position—War Admiral's is No. 7—he should be given an outside chance. R. A. Moore's Piccolo also has shown some smart trials as has Burning Star, one of the Shadown farm. Even so, all three of the principal contenders rate to be 6 to 1 or better when the field goes off at about 4:30 p. m. (E. S. T.)

Lithonia.

WARRING, Ga., March 4.—Lithonia defeated Chumblee, 28 to 27, for the fifth district girls' basketball championship here tonight. The game was even all the way with neither team being able to gain any margin. The score at the end of the first period was: Lithonia 6, Chumblee 8; second period, Lithonia 17, Chumblee 18; third period, Lithonia 23, Chumblee 22.

Wright, for Lithonia, played an outstanding game at guard. In the C group Palmer Stone defeated Mansfield, 34 to 32. Harwell scored 23 points for Mansfield. Her total for the tournament in three games was 67 points.

his style. His curve ball is as hard for right-handers to hit as left-handers. He has good control. He had only two bad days last summer and he was sick one of those days."

Bill Terry picked Pezzullo up as a prospect when he was playing townball in Bridgeport, Conn. He had a good year with Richmond and then the Phillies got him. He won 16 and lost 4 at Richmond with a last-place ball club.

The Phillies hurt Pezzullo by not farming him out to a league he was ready to pitch in.

He has fine action on the mound. President Earl Mann was impressed in watching him throw to a catcher today.

"I sure hope he comes through for us. It would be a big help. It doesn't matter that he's a class man because we only have nine class men. We can use two more," Mann said.

Pezullo is a big boy of almost six feet and weighing around 185. He is in good shape, too.

A ROOKIE DEPARTS.

Otis Davis, a right-hander who had a fine knuckle ball, has decreased the squad of pitchers to 16 by returning to his home in LaGrange. He was rooming with Bull Hammons.

"That boy had the best knuckle ball for an amateur I ever saw," Hammons said. "He was homesick and wanted to leave."

This is the first training camp for Ross Stuart, a big right-hander from Chicago. It's all brand-new to him and he is getting a big kick out of it. Jack Sheehan recommended him to the Crackers. He's only a kid and is a product of the Chicago sandlots.

KIRKLAND AGAIN.

G. Kirkland, who several years ago gave Russell an N. G. I. C. title with a long field goal in the last 10 seconds of play, provided the margin of victory with two long field goals, just when they were needed late in the game.

Davis, high scorer Thursday night with 20 points, was closely guarded but sent two field goals and five fouls through the baskets for nine points. He shot five fouls out of six tries.

Commercial scoring was well divided, though Janko, a substitute in the last quarter, was out in front with four field goals.

"THERE THEY GO"—$100,000 SANTA ANITA RACE.

Off for a hundred grand—my mate—
"There they go—there they go!"
Pounding hoofs through the starter's gate—
No time here for a bloke to wait—
No spurs here for a guy to blow—
A hundred grand is a pile of cash
To win or lose in a moment's flash.

Off for a hundred grand, old kid—
"There they go—there they go!"
Who is making the early bid?
Who is the first to fade or skip?
Who is ready to steal the show?
A hundred grand is a pile of tin,
For you or me—or a horse to win.

A hundred grand at the waiting wire—
"There they go—there they go!"
Who is the first to break or tire?
Who is the one that will catch on fire?
No spot here for the weak or slow—
Around the turn with the stretch at hand—
The whip—the whip—and a hundred grand!

Local Basketball

The Jewish Educational Alliance Basketball league will come to a close on Sunday, March 6, at 4 p. m., when the championship game between A. S. G. and S. P. C. will be played.

Both teams are in the lead, having each won seven and lost one. The playoff game will decide all the controversy that has existed all season as to which is the best team in the Alliance. An individual duel among the leading scorers of the league, Parades of S. P. C. and Edelstein, of A. S. G., will be a highlight of the game.

As a special attraction to the big game two preliminary games will be played. In the first game the Atlanta Midlets will play J. P. C. at 2:30 p. m. Two weeks ago the Atlanta Midlets, J. P. C. fans with a 1-0 victory over J. P. C. and the Midlets plan to put on another great show.

In the second game Atlanta All-Stars will play the Atlanta Midlets. The Atlanta All-Stars won the last game of the "Cubs" 27-25 in an over-time period, so this game will provide plenty of action.

The Miller Service quint defeated the White Provision Company five 32-18 on the Maddox Junior High school court Thursday night, in their last league game of the current season. The Miller Service boys have had a very successful season, winning 17 games against only one defeat.

Frederikson Enters
S. E. C. Boxing Finals

NEW ORLEANS, March 4.—(AP)—Morris Bohrer, trim little Louisiana State bantamweight, was the first to qualify for the Southeastern conference boxing finals. He stopped Aldo Garcia, of Florida, in the first semi-final bout tonight after 23 seconds of the second round.

Russell Long, of Mississippi State, the babe who sprung a surprise this afternoon by trimming Mississippi's Ray Medlock, swept on to the lightweight finals with Henry Frederiksen, of Georgia, by putting Maurice Geldert, of Tulane, away two minutes and 45 seconds after the third-round started. Long dropped Geldert for a nine-count in the second round, and again for eight early in the third before the referee stopped the fight.

Frederiksen took a clean-cut decision from Jules Rosenthal, of Louisiana State. It was a slow scrap from start to finish, with neither fighter appearing willing to mix it up. The Georgia boy, piled up a safe margin of points.

Grand Jury Demands Caution In Granting Prison Paroles

Declares Indiscreet Freeing of 'Repeaters' Defeats Reduction of Crime.

A call for the "Prison Commission of Georgia to use more caution and discretion in releasing repeaters" was voiced yesterday in presentments of the Fulton county January-February grand jury.

Pointing attention to "seriousness of the crime situation in Fulton county," presentments charged there "will be no reduction of crime" until the prison commission heeds the call for more caution in releasing previous offenders.

Lloyd A. Walker, city purchasing agent, was exonerated from criticism in connection with purchase of sewer pipe. Acting on a request from Mayor Hartsfield the grand jury made a "lengthy investigation" into the matter, presentments said.

"Because of some recent testimony in a federal court here, reflecting on the integrity of the city purchasing agent's office in connection with sewer pipe purchases, this body made a lengthy investigation. No grounds for criticism of the city purchasing agent could be found and no evidence of collusion or misconduct in the proper discharge of his duties was developed," presentments said.

At the same time, confinement of sale of liquors "to strictly business sections, if, and when, sale of liquors should become legalized in Fulton county" was recommended.

The presentments further advocated organization of a citizens' committee to draft recommendations from the Reed survey for a county-wide vote.

The jury was discharged yesterday afternoon by Superior Judge Virlyn B. Moore.

"Pardons, paroles and suspended sentences are becoming a serious menace to society. It is apparent that there will be no reduction in crime until the prison commission of Georgia uses more caution and discretion in releasing repeaters," the presentments charged.

The presentments called for "utmost discretion" on the part of law enforcement agencies in controlling sale of liquor in the county.

Enforcement Demanded.

"Persons with past criminal records, or of doubtful character should be denied licenses," presentments said, adding opening and closing hours should be "rigidly enforced," and drinking drivers prosecuted "to the full extent of the law."

Presentments called for county commissioners, city authorities and the Chamber of Commerce to organize a citizens' group to draft specific recommendations to be submitted to a referendum of the voters.

Special attention was called to points in the Reed survey recommending co-operative vocational school plan between the city and county and suggesting changes in the plan of selecting Atlanta board of education members.

Steps Necessary.
Steps "such as are necessary to improve the health of both city and county" should be taken, jurors said, pointing out "health of a community is of paramount importance."

A list of indictments returned by the jury was submitted with the note that "the number of violent and major crimes is very high," and that the record should "emphasize the seriousness of the crime situation in Fulton county."

Presentments were signed by E. G. Decker, foreman, and Frank K. Shaw, secretary.

TRAIL BODY ELECTS.

AUGUSTA, March 4.—(P)—Judge Gordon W. Saussy and Charles G. Gay, of Savannah, were named members of the board of directors of the Oglethorpe Trail Association at a meeting here today. Other directors are Paul Shearhouse and J. B. Kessler, Effingham county; J. A. Mills and W. G. Sharpe, Screven; C. W. Skinner and W. K. Tucker, Burke; and Frank Miles and Henry Culum, Richmond.

Georgia Motorists Warned to Get Tags

Georgia motorists apparently have gone on a sit-down strike against obtaining 1938 license tags for their automobiles and trucks.

Only 199,785 registrations had been filed up to March 1, as compared with 300,213 for the same period last year. Marcus P. McWhorter, director of the motor vehicle division of the state revenue department, disclosed yesterday.

With two reprieves, autoists have but until March 15 to obtain tags without penalty. McWhorter warned no further extension in time will be granted.

CZECH WARNS NAZIS NATION WILL FIGHT

PRAHA, Czechoslovakia, March 4.—(P)—Premier Milan Hodza told a madly cheering chamber of deputies today that Czechoslovakia's borders are "absolutely untouchable."

This was the answer of the war-created republic to issues raised by Reichsfuehrer Hitler's coup in Austria and German Field Marshal General Goering's promise of protection for "ten millions of Germans just across our borders."

Hodza said Czechoslovakia would discuss problems with Germany on a "basis of absolute equality," but, to the wild cheers of the chamber, he swore she would defend her sovereignty and independence to her "last breath."

"We want peace," the Premier declared, "but with things as they are today we must let it be known that if destiny confronts us with the necessity of defending our strength, we will resist with all our strength."

Hodza went directly from the crowded chamber to a luncheon for former President Herbert Hoover given by President Eduard Benes at his palace.

HOARE SAYS BRITAIN WON'T TAKE DICTATION

LONDON, March 4.—(P)—Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare told a Chelsea conservative meeting tonight Great Britain would not "submit to peace at any price" and would not support any peace except "peace with honor."

Our great rearmament program," he said, "shows that we will not submit to dictation from any quarter of the world."

GERMANY WARNS CZECHS TO 'CORRECT MINORITIES'

BERLIN, March 4.—(UP)—The German foreign office's semi-official organ, Diplomatic Political Correspondence, warned Czechoslovakia tonight to correct her minorities situation lest it lead to "power of bayonets" in oppressing 1,500,000 Germans living there.

The warning, which cautioned Czechoslovakia against seeking the aid of foreign powers and "perhaps even the power of her own bayonets" against the German minority, was a swift answer to Premier Milan Hodza's speech before the Czech parliament today.

Hodza said the Czech government would go to war, if necessary, to protect her frontiers from any German invasion.

2 ARKANSAS BANDITS FLEE WITH $6,000 LOOT

DANVILLE, Ark., March 4.—(P)—Two bandits who looted the Bank of Danville of approximately $6,000 apparently had escaped tonight in the Ouachita mountains south-east of here.

The pair, masked and armed, held bank officials and two customers at bay until the vault time lock opened at 9 a. m. today, scooped up all the cash in sight, forced their captives inside and locked the door. The prisoners, after a half-hour of shouting, attracted attention and were released.

GROUP ORGANIZES TO AID CRIPPLES

Plans Mapped To Rehabilitate Every Afflicted Child in County.

A move to rehabilitate every crippled child in Fulton county was initiated last night with the organization of the Crippled Children's Society of Fulton County.

George Yancey was named president of the new charity organization. Other officers are Jesse Draper, first vice president; Mrs. Alva G. Maxwell, second vice president; James F. Alexander, treasurer; and J. Clayton Burke, secretary.

Private Organization.
Dedicated to a program of physical care, special education, training and placement of the young crippled of the county, the society is a private organization affiliated with the Crippled Children's League of Georgia.

Dr. Theodore Toepel, president of the league, explained to a group of Atlanta citizens who met last night for the organization meeting that the Fulton county society will be used as a model for other counties in the state to follow. It is the first county group to be organized.

Funds for carrying on the work of the organization will be raised through the sale of Easter crippled children seals and by private donations.

Immediately after organization, members of the society mapped plans for an extensive Easter seal drive from April 1 to April 17. The seals will be sold for one cent each or $1 per sheet.

Clinics for Diagnosis.
Principal functions of the organization will be to conduct clinics for diagnosis of ailments, provide hospital care and treatment, arrange for convalescent care, develop educational facilities, assist in securing vocational training, help in obtaining vocational placement and prevent causes of crippling, in co-operation with other agencies.

Only those children will be treated whose parents are unable to offer financial assistance for services rendered, and there will be no discrimination as to race, sex or creed, leaders said.

Services will be given through clinics, preferably in rural areas where, it was explained, "the need is most pressing." The clinics will be conducted by authorized orthopedic surgeons.

1,000 in County.
Dr. Toepel said there are now approximately 1,000 crippled children in Fulton county, with a total of 7,557 registered for the state.

Eighty per cent of the money raised through sale of seals will be used for restoring crippled children. Forty per cent of the sale remains in the county, 60 per cent is sent to the state society, of which 10 per cent goes to national headquarters and 10 per cent is used by state society for expenses.

College Editor Asks for Beauty, But Now He Is Trying to Escape It

Pegago Has Fun With Contest for Film 'Queens' at Oglethorpe Till Movie People Cross Him Up and Gals Get in His Hair.

Oglethorpe University "campus queens" have stars in their eyes and, as a result, Chris Pegago, editor of the Stormy Petrel, campus weekly, has "queens" in his hair.

It's all because Editor Pegago started a "campus queen" contest a few weeks ago at the prompting of a Hollywood film studio.

Now with the contest complete, the editor, or "Poor Pegago," as his fellow students have dubbed him, has to select photographs of the "most beautiful" and send them on to Hollywood judges, Directors Leroy Prinz, I. Gensler and Raoul Walsh.

May Be a Contract.
These three have just completed a college picture and have informed the editor there may be a film contract for one of the Oglethorpe "queens."

All Pegago has to do now is select the "most beautiful" photographs, attach a description of the girl to each photo and write "recommended" on the ones he thinks have what it takes to become a star.

But when Oglethorpe's "queens" heard of the recommending power, they started looking for "Poor Pegago."

Now the young editor runs from doorway to doorway, taking time out to hide behind an occasional tree now and then. His life since the contest closed has been somewhat like that of a hunted rabbit.

Open Season on Him Now.
Blondes, brunettes and red-heads—they make a dash for the editor whenever he appears.

To Pegago the daily questions, "Surely you're going to recommend me?" and "Don't you think I'm beautiful?" are just a headache, despite the charms of the Hollywood-aspiring questioners.

Editor Pegago looked up from his typewriter yesterday long enough to make the emphatic comment:

"Each one of them is beautiful. Blondes, brunettes, and red-heads, I personally recommend them all."

PARADE LAUNCHES USED AUTO WEEK

Sharp Increase in Sales Expected; Dealers To Lower Prices.

Looking for a sharp increase in used car sales and a corresponding increase in general business, automobile dealers of Atlanta today begin an intensive sales campaign as their part in the observance of National Used Car Exchange Week.

The only decrease customers may expect on used cars this week, dealers said, is a fall in prices. All members of the business hope for sweeping clearance sales.

A parade of about 100 shiny used cars attracted much attention downtown yesterday. It was staged by the dealers at the prologue to the week's drive, which will last through next Saturday night.

George M. Couch, president of the Atlanta Automobile Dealers' Association, declared yesterday plans for observance of the week here include daily advertising, intensive work on the part of sales forces and speeches to various groups by prominent automobile men. More than $1,000,000 is being spent throughout the nation by manufacturers this week, it was announced.

Bright Spot in Economic Picture
Is Stability of Commodity PricesLabor Bureau Statistics Index Records First Gain in 6 Weeks.

By GEORGE T. HUGHES.

(Copyright, 1938, for The Constitution and the North American News-Paper Alliance, Inc.)

NEW YORK, March 4.—The relatively bright spot in the general economic picture is the increasing evidence of stability in commodity prices.

This week, the Bureau of Labor Statistics index recorded the first advance in six weeks. However, the rate of decline had been leveling off for a month past. The Analyst index also rose this week for the second successive time. In both cases, the comparisons with a year ago show large recessions, but a resistance point seems to have been reached, temporarily at least.

The same situation is portended in the moodier spot commodity index. This compilation has its low in late November, which point has not since been seriously threatened.

The index, with December 31, 1931, taken as par, was 144.6 on November 24 and is now 150.7.

It is perhaps significant that the low points in both stocks and commodities were recorded in the late fall and that in both cases the fluctuations have been held in so narrow a range.

The items which have come back to the market and leading products at 94.6 metals and metal products at 96.2 and building materials at 91.9, which presumably are too high if 1926 is the proper yardstick.

The Washington dispatches report that the administration investigation of prices in general is proceeding under expert direction. When the results are made public, we shall know which prices are too high and which too low. Or shall we?

Notwithstanding the apparent steadiness of farm prices in general, there is decidedly reactionary. Supply in Chicago broke sharply Friday in further evidence of the higher estimates of the winter wheat crop.

For several weeks, May wheat has been meeting support every time it sold down to the 92 or 93-cent level, but it broke through this point Friday with losses in all options running to over 2 cents a bushel. At the close, May was only a little more than five cents above the low of the contract range established in November.

While we're on the subject, it may be well to point out that the estimate of the Bureau of Agriculture indicates show cash farm income down substantially from a few years ago.

Business Trends
In Financial News

(Copyright, 1938)

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—

Among the favorable and unfavorable items in the day's business news are the following:

FAVORABLE.
Chrysler Corp. automotive divisions have increased operations moderately to a single turn four-day week.

UNFAVORABLE.
Revenue freight car loadings in week ended February 26 totaled 511,930 cars, a decrease of 23,860 cars from previous week, and a decline of 160,939 cars from like 1936 week.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY. Bell system, had station gain of 30,000 telephones in February, against gain of 92,000 in February, 1937, and 31,500 in January, 1938.

General Electric Co. bookings in first two months of 1938 totaled $41,348,000, decline of 36 per cent from bookings in like 1937 period.

AAA payments excluded. The estimate is $803,000,000, and, with AAA payments included, it is $820,000,000. The corresponding figures for 1937 are $638,000,000 and $681,000,000, respectively.

These computations are interesting in view of all that has been said about the maintenance of farm purchasing power as an offset to loss of industrial buying power.

Whatever comfort may be gleaned from the commodity price situation, there is little favorable to be said about the current level of railway traffic. This week's car loading statement, for the seven days ending February 26, showed the lowest total for any comparable week since 1933, which, it will be remembered, was just before the banking holiday. It raises the question of how effective an advance in rates may be toward restoring railroad solvency.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, at this writing, has still not made its decision known, but even if it should grant the full 10 per cent rate asked for, the problem of halting the falling off in freight would still be unsolved.

Weather Outlook.

Aviator Concludes Leveas-ky, Companions Failed To Reach Alaskan Coast.

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS.

AKLAVIK, N. W. T., March 4. (By Wireless)—We have just made more than 3,000 miles in flight from Aklavik during our search of the Alaskan mountains for Sigismund Leveas and his five companions, lost last August on a flight from Moscow to Alaska.

The group of about 50 indicated its intention to hold the house in session over the week end if necessary, "to get this jam off the calendar." Adjustment came finally at 5 p. m.

SALARY BOOST VOTED FOR VIRGINIA JUDGES.
RICHMOND, Va., March 4.—(AP) Higher salaries and increased retirement benefits for Virginia judges were approved by the senate today.

Both house and senate passed uncontested legislation as fast as the titles of bills could be read, and the house found time to pick up contentions over the Haag-Waddell alcohol report where the senate left off.

MISSISSIPPI SOLONS PREPARE FOR PLAY.
JACKSON, Miss., March 4.—(AP) The legislature called time out from work today and prepared for a week end of play on the Mississippi golf course.

The holiday spirit was so pronounced among leaders steering a lengthy highway patrol bill through the house held a caucus and decided to lay it aside for the week end and finish it next Tuesday.

3 SMALLPOX CASES REPORTED IN CITY.
Vaccinations Urged by City Health Officer.

With three cases of smallpox reported in the last two days, Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, and the Fulton County Medical Society issued warnings yesterday that persons without vaccination scars should be immunized immediately.

Two servants and a white woman have been confined to the contagious disease hospital by Dr. Kennedy.

"It is the first time in more than seven years we have had smallpox in the city of Atlanta," said the city health officer. "It was brought in probably by a transient, and the committee on public health and instruction of the medical society urged all unvaccinated persons in the city and surrounding territory to be vaccinated immediately."

Several cases of smallpox have been reported in DeKalb county in the past few weeks, Dr. Kennedy said.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

...BY SIR HUBERT WILKINS.

AKLAVIK, N. W. T., March 4.
By Wireless!—We have just made more than 3,000 miles in flight from Aklavik during our search of the Alaskan mountains for Sigismund Levanovsky and his five companions, lost last August on a flight from Moscow to Alaska.
The mountains from latitude 141 west to 154 west longitude have been covered without revealing a sign of the missing plane.
On Wednesday, we flew four times along the full length of the mountains on easterly and westerly courses, and, yesterday, after having skied 153 west longitude, and having walked back and forth, north and south, across the mountains on courses less than 10 miles apart, we have reached the Alaskan boundary. We then made one more long west and east flight along the southern slopes of the foothills before turning into Old road, where we have been attempting to pick up gas before returning to Aklavik.
I believe the search made by the American and Alaskan aviators last fall and the one we have recently completed in Alaska has covered that area with practical completeness and that we must now conclude Levanovsky, in spite of the report by an Eskimo who claims to have seen his plane, did not reach the Alaskan coast.
We returned to Aklavik this morning and will fill our tanks with gas ready to be off for a long flight northwards over the ice at the first opportunity.

Warrants for three additional years, from 1944-47, are yet to be accounted. Governor Rivers said these might be taken up by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.
